BERNA AND REIDPATH WINNERS

STOCKHOLM, July 13.—The 3,000-metre run in the Olympic games today was won for the United States by T. S. Berna, the great Cornell University runner. Berna run a great race and the American section of the grandstand poured its appreciation as he sped across the line.

The Stars and Stripes scored again in the team race of 3,000 metres (one mile, 140 yards and 10 inches). The United States team won with the lowest score, nine points. Sweden was second with thirteen and Great Britain third with twenty-three.

The 5,000-metre team race was a beautiful exhibition. While of Sweden and Peter of Great Britain set the pace during the first half of the contest, Abel Kivisti of the Irish-American A. C. was third.

In the next to the last lap Berna, who had been holding himself in check, began to forge ahead on a strong spurt. The Americans in the stands arose to their feet with yells of triumph. Up to the time Berna began to gain he had been running in last place. He gave a thrill to the crowd as he dashed forward, running so swiftly that his feet did not seem to touch the earth. Olsson, of Sweden, unlimbered all his speed in an attempt to over take the fleet Yankee, but he was unable to do so. Berna's time was 8 minutes 44.3-5 seconds.

At the conclusion of the discus throw in the decathlon, Thorpe had 2,544 points; Lomberg, Sweden, 2,299 points, and Meyer had 2,291.

Olsen the Swede, was second. His time was 8 minutes, 45.2-5 seconds. Norman S. Taber, of Brown University, was third. His time was 8 minutes, 45.3-5 seconds.

Wide of Sweden was fourth; George V. Bonhag of of the Irish American A. C. fifth; Cottill of Great Britain, sixth and Owen, also of Great Britain, was seventh.

The winning of the 3000-metre race practically assures victory in the Olympiad to America.

Platt Adams was the standing high jump. He is brother, Ben Adams, was second.

Charles D. Reidpath of Syracuse University won the final in the 400-metre run, breaking the Olympic record.

It was the first final of the day and when it went to the United States, the Yankee spectators cheered old Glory as it was hoisted above the crowded Stadium.

Reidpath won in the final in 48 1-5 second. The old record was 49 1-5 seconds, made by Hillman of America at the Olympic games at St. Louis in 1904.

Braun of Germany finished second and Edward F. Lindsey of the Chicago A. A. was third.

D. L. Young of the Boston A. A. was not allowed by the Olympic officials to start, because he had been disqualified in the final heat of the 400-metre yesterday for fouling Braun. Young denied that he had fouled Braun and threatened to appeal to the International Jury.

The 400-metre event was run in lanes marked off by strings to prevent the runners from interfering with each other. Braun, the German runner, had the advantage in the first half of the race, but the speedy Reidpath overtook him and won out by a clean foot.

In the Decathlon events today E. L. Mercer of University of Pennsylvania, won the 100-metre dash in the fast time of eleven seconds flat. James Thorpe of the Carlisle Indian School, was second; Jacobson of Sweden was third and Borh of Germany was fourth.

Mercer's jump was 6.81 metres, or 22.44 feet. Thorpe's time in the 100 metre dash was 11.2 seconds. His jump was 6.76, or 22.27 feet. Both Mercer and the Indian boy were given a hearty round of applause when they had done their turn.

A. R. Taipale of Finland repeated his performance of yesterday by winning the right and left hand discus throw. The Finn had no difficulty in winning from his American opponents.

James Thorpe, the Carlisle Indian, led in the Decathlon events at the end of the discus throw competition. Lomberg of Sweden was second to Thorpe. E. L. Mercer of the University of Pennsylvania was third, and Westlander of Sweden, fourth.

SUMMARIES.

400-metres final—First, Charles D. Reidpath, Syracuse University; second, Braun, Germany; third, Edward Lindberg, Chicago A. A. Time—48.2, which beats old Olympic record by one second.

Decathlon, 100-metre dash—First, E. L. Mercer, University of Pennsylvania; second, James Thorpe, Carlisle Indian School; third, Jacobson, Sweden; fourth, Borh, Germany. Time of winner, 11 seconds flat.

Decathlon—Discus throw (good jump: Mercer, 22.44 feet; Thorpe, 22.27 feet.

TEAM RACE, 3,000 METRES (One mile, 1,459 yards, 10 inches).

Final—United States, 9 points; second, Sweden, 18 points; third, Great Britain, 23 points.

Throwing the discus, right and left, final. First—A. R. Taipale, Finland.

Gov. Plaisted Sunday Editor To Turn Out Great American

GOV. PLAISTED, ARRIVING AT AMERICAN OFFICE.

HE KNOWS HOW, FOR HE OWNS AND EDITS A PAPER OF HIS OWN.

Governor Frederick William Plaisted of Maine, who came down from his home in Augusta today to take charge of the Sunday AMERICAN for tomorrow, is one of the scores of young Democrats who have come to the top in the last few years at the dawning of a new day for Democracy.

The Governor of Maine is a newspaper man, forty-six years old, in moderate circumstances. Like Governor Wilson of New Jersey, he lives in a rented house.

When Plaisted was selected as the standard bearer of Augusta Democracy in the city campaign of 1906—six years ago—the Democrats of Augusta were so few that they were all acquaintances. Only twice in fifty or sixty years—in 1869 and again in 1893—had the Democrats elected a Mayor. Neither of the winners had negotiated a re-election.

Plaisted Popular.

And yet it seemed like a foregone conclusion in 1906. Plaisted was immensely popular. Everybody in the capital knew him. He didn't have an enemy. His newspaper, the New Age, made enough politically, had nothing but kindly words for individuals.

In all the city, however, there were only 55 enrolled Democrats. The enrolled Republicans numbered 1,400. Of the eight city wards only four maintained a Democratic ward organization.

Plaisted was elected. He was re-elected

TWO BADLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

A man and a woman were seriously injured and three other persons were badly shaken up in a collision between automobiles at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Boylston street early today.

The seriously injured are Mrs. Mary H. King of No. 96 Huntington avenue and Prince A. Williams of No. 137 Appleton street. Both sustained bad cuts about head and face and were taken to the Grace Hospital.

Mrs. King and Williams were riding in an auto owned by William Burke of No. 179 Broadway, Everett, and operated by John C. Sullivan of No. 129 St. Botolph street. With them was Miss Freda Corey of No. 5 Oliver place. Miss Corey and Sullivan were both shaken up.

The Red Sox and Tigers will clash in the third game of their series at Fenway Park this afternoon and a stirring contest is expected by the "fans." The Sox captured both games of the double-header yesterday, and the men piloted by Hughey Jennings are out to get revenge.

The Red Sox are confident that they will make it three straight today. They are now playing a fast, snappy game and hope to gain a few more points on the Senators and Athletics.

The Washington team is now in second place, but Jake Stahl is not worrying a great deal about being beaten out by the team from the Capital. The Seniors are playing wonderful ball, but the Red Sox players do not believe they will be able to stand the gaff in the final dash for the wire.

A record-breaking crowd is expected to turn out for today's game with the Tigers. The 17,000 odd "fans" who saw yesterday's two great struggles were enthusiastic over the pennant chances of the locals and they will all go on hand today with several thousand more baseball fans.

"Buck" O'Brien or Charley Hall will likely go into the box for the Red Sox. Both of these men have been twirling grand ball lately, and they should make things interesting for the visitors.

Hall wrenched his side in the recent series with the Athletics, but is now all right. If Stahl decides to use O'Brien today, the "Sea Lion" will go against Jennings' men on Monday.

The Red Sox are now playing like real champions and the team that beats them out for the pennant will have to show remarkable form. All of Stahl's men are literally working their heads off in order to win each and every game.

The Red Sox crew will have to continue at a fast pace, however, if they hope to down the Tigers again today. Detroit is out of the race for the pennant, but the men piloted by Hughey Jennings are still able to give a good account of themselves.

The locals cannot afford to take chance with a club which possesses such sluggers as Cobb, Crawford, Delehanty, Bush and Moriarty. It is true that the Tiger pitchers are not going very well lately, but, regardless of this fact, they are dangerous. President Taft is elated over the showing that his men have made during the past six weeks. He is confident that they will prove a little bit too classy for the other American League teams.

WILLIAMS MAY ENTER FIELD FOR GOVERNOR

Former Representative James A. Watson took out a set of nomination papers for Governor today, declaring at the time:

"It would be funny, now wouldn't it, if George Fred Williams ran for Governor? Mr. Williams is waiting to see if Governor Foss will run again. If the Governor does not run again, why Mr. Williams may be a candidate.

Mr. Watson declined to say point blank whether or not the nomination papers were for Mr. Williams and were being taken out with or without his consent.

Captain Latimer, Who Charges the Police with Unjust Arrest

ARRESTED ON FALSE CHARGE, SAYS LATIMER

"Inspector Pierce Must Have Lost His Head," Says Military Man Arrested in Crowd About L Cars; Court Hearing Is Continued Until Next Friday.

Captain Charles H. Latimer of the Charlestown City Guards appeared in Charlestown District Court before Judge W. H. Preble this morning, charged with assault and battery on Police Inspector Henry M. Pierce. Captain Latimer pleaded not guilty and asked for a continuance.

Latimer was arrested by Inspectors Pierce and George Patterson, when a crowd assembled about two trolley cars on Bunker Hill street, near Baldwin. Inspector Pierce is a son of Superintendent of Police Pierce. He was bailed out by Major Frank Meredith of the regiment, who furnished $200 surety.

"I am not represented by counsel at this time, and I have not been able to collect all my witnesses," he said to the court. "I want to prove conclusively that it was I who was assaulted, without the slightest cause, and that I did not even retaliate."

The court granted Captain Latimer's petition for a continuance and assigned the case to next Friday's calendar.

After leaving court Captain Latimer said:

Says Pierce Lost Head.

"I have been subjected to the humiliation of arrest on a false charge, I have suffered the indignity of an unwarranted assault, I have been made the victim of unpleasant notoriety and for no good reason. I will push this thing to the utmost limit.

"Inspector Pierce must have lost his head. There is no other explanation that I can give. He magnified the importance of the little knot of people gathered there and mistook their intentions. Before the real situation became known to him he thought he had to make a show of authority.

"There had been some trouble on a passing electric car. The conductor stopped to get names of witnesses. Another car was stopped. At this moment a few curious people gathered. Just then I came out of the station with half a score of men. Some of these men with me were present employees of the Elevated. We had hardly reached the scene when the crowd had collected before Inspectors Pierce and Patterson drove up in an auto.

"Pierce jumped out of the machine and, without asking a question or attempting to acquaint himself with the situation, he began pushing one of the men standing by me. This man is an employe of the Elevated and is not a striker.

"I said to the inspector, speaking as an officer of the law and sworn myself to maintain peace; 'You are making a mistake. There has been no trouble here.'

Beaten With Club.

"He then drew a blackjack from his pocket and began to beat me about the neck and shoulders."

"Did you retaliate?" Captain Latimer was asked.

"No. I remembered that I was an officer of the law myself and I refrained. If I had assaulted him he would not have been in court this morning. He especially would not have been here without a mark on him. I kept my temper as well under control as possible, thinking to get satisfaction in a proper manner afterward."

Inspector Pierce refused to make any statement today in explanation of the arrest of Captain Latimer.

"I am a police officer," he said, "and I will tell my story only to the court."

When Captain Latimer left the courthouse he said:

"I will be here next Friday with at least ten disinterested witnesses—besides many members of my company—who will testify that I am telling the truth."

Inspector Pierce is thirty-eight. Twelve years ago he joined the police force as a reserve officer. He was a patrolman six years when he was made an inspector.

ELEVATOR FALLS AT CITY HALL; WOMEN ABOARD

There was excitement at the City Hall today when an elevator on the west side of the building dropped from just below the second floor to half-way into the basement. There the safety clutch worked and the car came to a sudden stop. The eight passengers and the operator were frightened. While the occupants of the car were debating how to get out there was an explosion and the car took another drop, stopping half-way between the basement floor and the subbasement. The women passengers began to scream. The door of the car was opened and all scrambled out in a hurry.

ICEHOUSE BURNS; ICEBERG LEFT

FALL RIVER, July 13.—Fire early today burned to the ground the seven big ice houses of the Arctic Ice Company on the shore of Watuppa Pond. Some 25,000 tons of ice stored there was not destroyed, however, and is standing in frozen masses like gigantic icebergs. The loss will be between $35,000 and $40,000. The greater part of the ice can be saved, it is believed.

The cause of the fire is still a mystery. The icehouses were the biggest in this section.

The blaze was discovered by the foreman, who lives in a house in the yard.

PUT OFF CASE OF BOY INCENDIARY

James Edward Welch, the ten-year-old Charlestown boy who confessed to setting fire to the Rutherford avenue baysheds of the Boston & Maine railroad on July 6, entailing a loss of $50,000, was arraigned in the Charlestown district court today on the charge of being a delinquent child. His mother, Mrs. John J. Welch, was in court, but her husband could not be found and the case continued one week without a hearing, in the hope the boy's father may come forward.

MISS TAFT TO TOUR IN NATIONAL PARK

MINNEAPOLIS, July 13.—Mrs. George E. Vincent, wife of President Vincent of the University of Minnesota, has been invited by Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the President, to chaperon a party of young people on a tour through Glacier National Park, Montana, in August.

O'Meara Defends Use of 'L' Autos for Police Work

Commissioner O'Meara was asked today to explain the use of automobiles furnished by the Elevated company to Police Inspectors Henry Pierce and George Patterson.

The following questions were put to him:

Q.—Commissioner O'Meara, is it true that your subordinates are being driven through the streets in autos owned by the Elevated?

A.—"Yes," replied the commissioner, positively.

Q.—Under what authority did you allow this?

A.—Mine.

Q.—Under what statute law or regulation are you acting?

A.—I prefer not to discuss this phrase of the question.

Q.—Do you know that Boston Central Labor Union as well as the strikers of the Elevated state that you have no authority for so doing?

A.—Nonsense. Police every day ride in cars owned by the Elevated company. There is no practical difference between police being transported from one section of the city to another in an electric car owned by the company than in being taken from one section to another in an automobile owned by the same company. I intend to use all legitimate means within my power to preserve public peace in this city, strike or no strike.

Q.—How many automobiles are being furnished you by the Elevated officials for use in this manner? A.—I do not care to specify.

THEFT FINE FOR WOMAN DOCTOR

Dr. M. Elizabeth Webb, of No' 4 Longwood terrace, formerly a student at Radcliffe college and a graduate of the Boston Medical school, now a well-known Back Bay physician, pleaded guilty to a charge of shoplifting in the Municipa court today. Immediately afterwards Gertrude McPherson, known to the police as the "gold-tooth girl," was arraigned on a similar charge.

Dr. Webb, now an elderly woman, who has been a practising physician for twenty-five years was arrested by Inspector Pelton and accused of operating in two department stores on Washington street. The inspector said she had a waist, shoes, silk stockings and a can of condensed milk, all he claimed stolen.

In court Dr. Webb made no plea for clemency. With bowed head, she uttered the one word, "guilty," in a low tone. She was fined $20 and placed in charge of a probation officer until the fine was paid.

After her arrest Dr. Webb was liked freely for a time, giving as her friends the names of well-known men who studied at Harvard when she was at Radcliffe. She had a lucrative practice for years, she said, then went abroad and on returning found most of her patients had become scattered. She refused to ask any of them for assistance and was forced to remain overnight in the city prison.

According to the police, Gertrude McPherson, "the gilt tooth girl," has a long police record. The police charged her with being caught with stolen goods in her possession in a department store. Through her counsel, Jesse Gove, she pleaded not guilty and asked for a continuance until next Thursday. This was granted by Judge Burke.

MISS SILSBEE AND MOTHER SUED FOR AUTO COLLISION

Miss Elizabeth Silsbee and her mother, Mrs. Sarah G. Silsbee, both of No. 512 Beacon street, are the defendants in two suits for damages brought by J. Traverse Roberts of Everett, as a result of an automobile collision on the Lynn boulevard. The actions, filed in court at Salem, are each for $4,000.

Roberts claims that he was driving his auto on the Lynn boulevard when the machine operated by Miss Silsbee, which was going at a "terrific and excessive rate of speed," collided with him. He says that his auto was damaged and he hurt.

The suit against Mrs. Silsbee names her as owner of the machine.

FALL RIVER PLAYER DRAWS SUSPENSION

FALL RIVER, July 13.—Charles Hickman, shortstop for the Fall River team of the New England League, was today suspended for an indefinite term on a charge of assault on Umpire White in the game between Fall River and Lynn yesterday. Hickman had two strikes called on him. The third one hit his foot but he swung at it and White called him out. Hickman did not like the decision rendered and assaulted White.

C. OLIVER ISELIN, HARVARD, FINED $25

C. Oliver Iselin, a Harvard student, son of Commodore Iselin of the New York Yacht Club, was fined $25 in the Lynn police court today before Judge Lummus for overspeeding an auto on Lewis street, in that city, on July 8. Iselin pleaded guilty and paid the fine.

Mme. Mascagni Tries Suicide

Children Side With Composer Daughter Joins the Elopers

PIETRO MASCAGNI, HIS WIFE AND BESSIE ABOTT.

Attention to Show Girl Stirred Up Intense Jealousy in Mascagni Household.

ROME, July 13.—The turbulent elopement of Mascagni, the operatic composer, with Irma Bernlot, an alluring vaudeville dancer, has narrowly escaped a tragic conclusion.

Not only did the Signora Mascagni make a desperate assault on her husband with a heavy house key—and the keys of old Italian houses are no mean weapons of offence—but it is reported that today she attempted to commit suicide.

Happily the remaining members of her family seized and disarmed the desperate woman before she could accomplish her purpose.

Without any attempt to exculpate Mascagni, it cannot be denied that he has not been overburdened with domestic felicity. The Signora Mascagni, a woman of stern character and high temper, has doubtless been of great assistance in spurring on her clever husband, but the result has been much marital friction.

Temper and Temperament.

It is a case, in a word, of temperament and temper combined with jealousy.

The jealousy, by the way, is not without its interesting flavor, for when Mascagni quarreled with Liebler & Co. of New York, over the production of his opera "Ysobel," Signora Mascagni is reported to have more than hinted that one cause of the failure was a "certain man's" infatuation for a certain prima donna.

The prospective prima donna of "Ysobel" was Miss Bessie Abott, but any idea of a jealously directed impulse on Miss Abott is scouted here and all who know the circumstances agree that it was Mascagni's own disturbance and bad faith that brought about a broken contract.

But there is no doubt about the present cause for jealousy in the Mascagni domicile, and as it was that when on Thursday Mascagni returned home after visiting his show girl friend, whom he first met in London and had installed at the Costanzi Theatre, there was a terrible scene. The angry wife declared she had "discovered everything" and as proof gave the address of the meeting place.

Mascagni Confesses.

Mascagni confessed and told his wife that life with her was impossible and that he was determined to leave her and live with his Irma.

Instantly Signora Mascagni leaped into fury. She flung all available objects at her husband, and when he succeeded in dodging these, she pulled the key from a door and brought it down with a heavy whack on the composer's arm, temporarily crippling him.

Then a strange thing happened. The children sided with their father, and the servants, kindled with anger, struck the daughter.

Stunned still, when Mascagni, with arm torn, escaped from the house, the daughter, almost as angry as her mother, followed him and joined her father in his flight.

Mascagni had his daughter made their way to Arezzo to join the poet Gabriele D'Annunzio, one of whose illusions the composer has been settling to music, and there all trace of the fugitives, including Irma, is lost. It is believed, however, that they have gone to Paris.

NEW YORK, July 13.—Theodore A. Liebler, Jr., of Liebler & Co., who had contracted with Pietro Mascagni for a production of his opera "Ysobel," explained that not only had his firm and the members of the opera suffered through the composer's temperamental peculiarities, but Miss Bessie Abott had wasted several months in making a trip to Rome and learning the prima donna role of the opera under the direction of Mascagni, only to learn after she had completed her work that the contract between the composer and Liebler & Co. had been broken and that the opera would not be put on.

The lower picture is of Mme. Mascagni.

"Liebler & Co. and the publishers lost $20,000 by the transaction," said young Mr. Liebler. "We had made a contract with Mascagni for the production in New York of his opera, and by the terms of that contract we advanced to Mascagni about $20,000 from time to time.

"In our correspondence with him we suggested that he come to America and direct the orchestra for his opera for a stated period.

"We agreed, of course, to pay him a salary for this work, but we did not agree to advance any money to him under this contract, which was entirely separate from the other. To our amazement Mascagni, after a time, made demands upon us for certain sums of money on the strength of this supplementary contract. We tried to make the situation plain to him, but he would not listen to reason and informed us that the main contract would not be lived up to by him."

ROME, July 13.—The local newspapers refute the story of the Mascagni elopement. They say the musician repents of his admiration and is in a reconciliation with his wife, which he hopes will be speedy and complete.

Mascagni says his journey to Paris is connected with the composition of a new work about which he refuses to give any detailed information. He is much irritated over the gossip about his personal affairs.

WOMAN'S PROFESSION IS TELLING STORIES

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Washington has a professional story teller. One of the duties of Miss Lena F. Wilkins, an employe of the Washington Playgrounds Association, is to visit the playgrounds, gather the children around her and relate to them the story of the fairy prince who rescued the fairy princess from the dragon. Story telling is a new feature in playground work.

GOV. PLAISTED AS AN EDITOR

in 1907. He was re-elected in 1908. He ran a fourth time, and in 1910 lost by 90 out of 2,600 votes. He tried it a fifth time, and in 1910 came back, bringing a Democratic city government.

That Fall he ran for Governor, and as everybody knows, was elected by substantially 9,000 majority.

For more than thirty years the State of Maine had not had a Democratic Governor. Strangely enough, Governor Plaisted's Democratic predecessor had been his own father, General Harris Merrill Plaisted of Civil War fame.

Fighting Plaisted Line.

The Plaisteds date back to the very beginning of Maine, the first of the name is in this country having been Captain Roger Plaisted of Berwick, who, landing in 1660, was slain by the Indians twenty-five years later in King Philip's War.

They have always been fighters. A fine big muscular of the Eugene Foss school, somewhat conceals the fighting jaw of the Governor of Maine, but the jaw is there, as several gentlemen in Maine politics have learned on occasion to their no great pleasure. Of the Plaisteds in the Indian days one of the Maine historians says that "the name was more distinguished for military intrepidity."

The immediate forbears of General Harris M. Plaisted had settled away up at Jefferson, New Hampshire, "north country," where the present Governor's father was born in 1828. He worked his way through school, Lancaster Academy, St. Johnsbury Academy and Waterville College. He taught school. He studied law at the University of Albany, and in 1856 hung his shingle out at Bangor, Maine.

How Democrats Gained.

When '61 came, and the war broke out, Harris M. Plaisted enlisted. In thirty days he raised a company, K of the Eleventh Maine Infantry. In October Governor Washburn made him lieutenant-colonel of the regiment. He remained in the service until March, 1865, coming home a major-general by brevet. He had been a great admirer of Lincoln; he was a stout champion of Grant. He was not until much later that he left the Republican party.

Bangor sent him to the Legislature, the State three times elected him attorney general. In 1875 he went to Congress and in 1880 the Opposition nominated him for the Governorship. He was elected.

From one stock comes the young man who was "getting out a paper" in Augusta until his young friends rallied around him in 1906 and ran him for Mayor.

And see what has happened since "Fred" Plaisted came upon the centre of Democracy's stage in Maine.

Two Democratic United States Senators.

Two Democratic Congressmen.

A Democratic Legislature.

Maine's establishment as a "sanely progressive" community.

Legislative approval of the election of United States Senators by the people.

Maine added to the list of States favoring a national initiative and referendum.

The passage of the direct primary law.

The adoption of a graded tax on automobiles, which will this year yield $400,000, to be turned over to the State highway fund.

The Democrats of Maine, indeed, have accomplished pretty nearly everything they set out to do except to get rid of the unworkable legislatory clause in the State Constitution.

When the question of annulling this clause went to the people last September, the vote was 80,853 to 60,008 against annulment, a "Yes" majority of 20,845.

For a long time this very slender majority appeared to be the other way around. The "returns" indicated annulment, but Town Clerks had twenty days in which to file claims of error and come down with "records," official records, in place of the original "returns."

Came forward the town clerks of Limestone, Westfield, Athens and Mathiews Isle, with official records showing that their original returns were in error. From these town "Yes" votes were first reported "No," and the "No" vote returned with "Yes" figures. The result was that these four towns, instead of the first reported 454 to 62 in favor of annulment, had voted 454 to 62 to keep prohibition in the Constitution.

But the figures for the whole State told a surprising story.

From twenty cities came figures showing a net majority of 1,000 against Constitutional prohibition. This city majority, for Constitution, as it appeared, was barely overcome by the "Yes" vote in the rural districts.

Governor Plaisted and the other young Democrats associated with him in the progressive New Democracy of Maine believe that if the wets were fairly counted, should have it; and that the towns want Prohibition and should have it. The question will again be big in the September elections. There will, of course, be other issues. We shall hear more about them later.

Good Roads, His Hobby.

If Plaisted has an official hobby, it is "good roads." It has been much that he favors "trunk" lines, for the pleasure driver and the automobilist. He wants to have the farmer in touch with the railroad and the market. He says that in large measure this would mean "good roads, but not necessarily so. And he would build them with automobile fees. In this he says every farmer will own his own auto-truck. He expects to see them built by the thousand in the State of Maine, a factory being about to start at Hallowell near the capital.

Governor Plaisted arrived in Boston last night and reported at the AMERICAN office early today.

"Where's my desk?" he asked; "I want to get busy."

The new editor of the Sunday AMERICAN—for one issue only—made a splendid impression on everyone.

He is a handsome man, not too tall, with a smile that makes a vote every time it appears. But he can be serious, too.

In Maine the Governor is known as a Mason of high degree and one of the merriest like to New England's biggest playground.

He has been grand commander of the Knights Templar and is the present ruler of Augusta Lodge of the "Best People on Earth." The Governor is also prominent in the Grand Army of Veterans.

Governor Plaisted tore himself away from enjoyable outing at Boothbay Harbor to come down and get out the Sunday AMERICAN. Very shortly he will plunge into the battle for a re-election. The State election in Maine will be held on September 9. The campaign will occupy six weeks.

Up in Maine the prevailing opinion seems to be that the editor of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN will be handsomely re-elected.

SEEKING DEATH AUTO IN BOUT

The Boston police have been asked to help seek the driver of a gray runabout car which fled after striking and killing Miss Ettie Hennessy, twenty-seven, of West Bridgewater.

Immediately after the accident other automobiles pursued the car for several miles, but failed to locate it.

From glimpses caught of the machine there were two occupants, a man and a woman. Both are sought by the police.

Miss Hennessy had left her home on North Main street to walk to Brockton for exercise. She was walking rapidly, a mile outside the town, when a gray runabout, with no lamps lighted, swept out of the darkness of a stretch of overhanging willow trees and leaped upon her.

It hurled her fifteen feet to the side of the road. The runabout stopped, the young man at the wheel having put the brakes on hard. The motor went on and the driver leaped from his seat and ran around in front of the car, bent over and feverishly cranked it. In the runabout sat a young woman. The motor starting again, the driver leaped to the seat and sped away.

Close behind came several touring cars. As people walking along the road came running up, the motorists stopped and sprang to aid the injured young woman. One automobilist volunteered to find a doctor and jumped into his machine to see him at the office of Dr. O. A. Bilmdorf.

Others set out to catch the automobile which had struck Miss Hennessy. It had disappeared from sight, but two touring cars crowded on speed and set out after it.

They gave chase for several miles without catching sight of the runabout, and finally paused, believing that the machine they pursued must have turned down a side road toward Easton.

They found a telephone and notified police departments. The Brockton police piled some officers into an automobile and sped out on the roads around their city in the hope of finding the fugitive car. Other police departments set watches. For hours the search was kept up.

Miss Hennessy died just as Dr. Bilmore reached her. Medical Examiner Paine of Brockton took charge of the body.

GIVE ARCHBALD CHANCE TO SET DATE FOR TRIAL

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Judge Robert W. Archbald will be given a chance to set the date for the solemn ceremonial of impeachment in the Senate, and his preference will probably be followed.

At least a majority of the Republican Senators prefer to postpone the formal proceedings until cooler weather, meantime allowing both the House, which adopted the articles of impeachment without one dissenting vote, and the counsel for defence ample time for preparation. Democratic Senators are more disposed to favor earlier action, but both sides contend that Judge Archbald's preference should be given serious consideration.

ELISHA DYER HELPS SAVE SOCIETY GIRL

NEWPORT, July 13.—Had it not been for the quick work of Elisha Dyer and Deputy Sheriff Frank P. King, Miss Dorothea Carroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll, would have been run down and trampled under the feet of a horse attached to a heavy express wagon. Miss Carroll had just come from the Casino and had entered her small runabout auto. She backed out into Bellevue avenue, and Elisha Dyer, who was driving his express wagon, did not have time to pull his horse up to prevent a collision. Dyer jumped and got both front feet into the auto. Then Elisha Dyer rushed to the rescue with Deputy Sheriff King.

ALLEN JURY STILL OUT; AWAIT VERDICT

WYTHEVILLE, Va., July 13.—After being out four hours the jury in the case of Claude Allen, on trial for participating in the Hillsville Court House tragedy of last March, announced that it had reached an agreement, and court adjourned until today. They have not yet reported. Fred Allen will next be placed on trial July 17.

Calls Colleges Good Winter Resorts; Finds Co-Eds Flirtatious

CHICAGO, July 13.—A certain class of student looks on the fashionable universities as attractive Winter resorts, said the co-education of today is too prone to flirtation and frivolous gayety, according to Chancellor Samuel Avery of the University of Nebraska, who is president of the Higher Education Department of the National Education Association.

"Universities," he declared, "are nowadays too large. A student must be very brilliant or very troublesome before the college president becomes acquainted with him at all. The enormous influx of students has changed the character of the student body. In the early days practically all college students came from homes animated by an aspiration for higher things.

"Too many of the students have too much money, and there is too little democracy. If a French student drove to school in an automobile his fellows would turn it. The women are inclined to frivolity. In the old days the co-eds were chiefly the schoolma'am type, and would have resented flirtatious advances. Today in certain schools are sets of girls who find in college life only an opportunity for social enjoyment and flirting.

"The statement that Blank College is a mighty good Winter resort for men, if they have the price, shows the attitude of certain students. Every college president knows, and, if he is frank, will admit, that there is some truth in the strictures of the late R. T. Crane."

ELECT SUCCESSOR TO RICHESON NEXT WEEK

The Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, of which Clarence V. T. FOREMEN'S DAY AT SHOE FAIR

Today was the biggest of the National Shoe and Leather fair in Mechanics' Building. It was superintendents' and foremen's day, and hundreds of these, with their wives were here. Practically every shoe factory in New England closed its doors to allow foremen to make the trip to Boston.

Twelve members from each of the associations at Haverhill, Auburn, New York, St. Louis, Brockton, Lynchburg, Milwaukee, Montreal and Boston made up the hospitality committee for today.

The latter fair management sent out more than three thousand free pass boutons to superintendents and foremen, and the supply was not enough to meet the demand. About a thousand different shoe factories in this country, England, Canada, Germany and Belgium were represented.

The headquarters for the superintendents and foremen was at booth 182. The convention met at 2 p. m. in Paul Revere Hall.

FORAKER'S BROTHER IS OUSTED BY TAFT

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., July 13.—President Taft has requested the resignation of Creighton M. Foraker, for thirteen years United States marshal of New Mexico and brother of ex-United States Senator J. B. Foraker. Foraker's resignation is understood to have been forwarded several days ago. Friends of Foraker allege the resignation is the result of the marshal's refusal to take an active part in politics.

HOLD HEADLESS CASE SUSPECT

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 13.—In spite of the strong objections of the defence, including several sarcastic references to "great detective work," which in "three weeks' time had not been able to get evidence," City Solicitor Erwin J. Francke succeeded in getting two weeks' continuance of the case against Henry Deslover, the big Belgian weaver, who is charged with the murder of Mrs. Angele Parmentier-Delmar in the famous "headless body mystery."

City Solicitor Francke admitted that the prosecution is not ready to go on with the case, but he demanded more time in which to hunt for the missing head.

As an argument against releasing a defendant already held two weeks without any evidence being introduced in court, Francke cited the sensational murder of Parkman, by Professor Webster, at Harvard College, in which the crime was finally proven and the murderer executed, though the police had only part of the body of the murdered Parkman to work from.

Counsel Agree on Continuance.

Judge Charles H. McPee thought a continuance should be granted. Counsel finally agreed on July 27 as the date. Deslover's lawyer gave warning that this is the prosecution's last chance, and that they must be ready to go on with the case at that date.

Deslover, who sat in the dock by the side of Deputy Sheriff Briggs, couldn't understand any of the legal argument between Francke and his own counsel, Eugene L. Jalbert. Deslover's native tongue is his Belgian patois. He can also talk a little French, but he knows no English.

At the close of the hearing Jalbert, through an interpreter, told him he was held for two weeks more. Deslover said, "All right." Jalbert cautioned him not to talk with anyone except his lawyer. Then Deslover was taken back to State prison.

Deslover Smuggled to Court.

Deslover was brought over from prison last night and was lodged in the courthouse building. This was done for fear of some demonstration. About 150 spectators assembled in court, but no attempt at demonstration occurred.

Charles M. Arnold, court clerk, read the charge. City Solicitor Francke asked for a continuance, saying he knew of no objection from the defence. Jalbert picked this up quickly, saying:

"We certainly do object. No reason has been assigned for a continuance."

Francke then rehearsed the crime. He described it as the "most diabolical and fiendish ever perpetrated in New England." He declared his belief that the authorities had succeeded in placing the crime on Deslover.

"In cases of this kind," pursued Francke, "it is usual to grant this request for continuance. If the prisoner should be discharged today he might flee to another country.

"Again, the coroner has not had time to hold his inquest and the police sometimes anticipate the coroner, as they have done in this case.

Enough Evidence to Hold Man.

"While we do not feel ready to go on, we do feel that we have sufficient evidence to hold him."

Then Jalbert waxed sarcastic. He alluded to "great detective work" and to "three weeks' time and not able to get evidence sufficient to go on with the case." He declared it a most flagrant case of injustice to his client.

The police have been hunting diligently for the missing head. They hope it will be found any minute. Francke spurred for more time and cited the Parkman murder as one in which a conviction was finally obtained, after the police had worked under great disadvantage.

Judge McFee granted the fortnight's continuance. This will make an even month Deslover will have been in custody without the police producing any evidence in court. His detention is one of the longest, if not the longest, in Rhode Island criminal history, for a defendant charged with a capital crime to be held without the police showing their hand in the lower court.

Too Much Mother-in-Law? Ridiculous Mrs. Gardner Discusses Reno Divorce

Mother of Conservatory Professor Denies Statements Charging That Her Son Was Cruel.

Mrs. Ellen M. Gardner of No. 19 Garson street, Back Bay, mother of Professor Archibald M. Gardner of the New England Conservatory of Music, denied today statements that the professor's young wife, Mrs. Right Willard Gardner, is reported to have made in securing a divorce at Reno, Nev. The mother said the professor never quarrelled with anybody, though he may "tell a truth a little bluntly."

The Reno dispatches recounting the divorce said that Mrs. Bright Gardner asked desertion and cruelty. Samples of the statements quoted of her are as follows:

"When I asked him for a kiss he threw a half-way across the room.

"When I longed for a show of affection got a harsh rebuff.

"When I sought a caress he cried he said like to kill me."

"Were Incompatible."

Professor Gardner's mother was shown a Reno story. She said:

"She is too sensible to make such absurd statements. They will hurt her more than they will my son. It is even unnecessary to deny them. Friends of my son know them to be absolutely untrue, but the general public believes, we do not.

"I under the Massachusetts law a divorce could have been obtained on the ground of incompatibility, they would have been divorced over a year ago. After they were married it became evident that they were unsuited for each other.

"If she did make these statements at all, it seems to me that the assertion that either she did not realize their import or made them under the pressure of the moment. My son never quarrels with anybody, although he may have a way of telling the truth a little bluntly.

Gardner Conservatory Teacher.

"So far as the statement attributed to me of 'too much mother-in-law' is concerned, that is equally ridiculous. My son and his wife were not obliged to live with me. They could have set up housekeeping if they so desired. I never quarrelled with her. I never quarrel with anybody either my son or myself care to enter in a newspaper controversy. I do not wish to discuss this any further. The public can get whatever impression it may for as we are concerned."

Professor Gardner has been a piano instructor at the Conservatory several years. He secretly married Miss Bright H. Willard of Newark, O., in 1907. She was one of his pupils. They were forgiven by their parents and lived with the professor's mother at No. 19 Garrison street.

Mrs. Gardner went to Reno last Fall and established her necessary residence. She has just secured her divorce decree. The Reno despatches say that Professor Gardner has agreed to pay her a monthly sum for three years. They have no children.

Mrs. Gardner told the Reno court that her husband told her he knew he had made a mistake in his marriage and that he loved a "certain other young woman."

She said she could not endure the constant turmoil of her mother-in-law, that her husband spent all his income on himself and that he was indifferent to and neglected her.

NEW OUTRAGES IN RUBBER TRADE

LONDON, July 13.—In a supplementary report of conditions in the Peruvian rubber district, Sir Roger Casement, the British consul-general who was sent by the British government to the Amazon to investigate stories of outrages on natives in the rubber district, reveals startling instances of almost incredible brutality. A total failure on the part of the Peruvian government to respond to the demand for a reform of the rubber atrocities in the Putumayo district is indicated.

A mass of official correspondence which also was filed, completes the story and indicates generally the cordial co-operation of the State Department at Washington with the British Foreign Office to secure a remedy for the abuses.

In the report which has been made public by the Foreign Office, Sir Roger says that on revisiting the country in October, 1911, he found the abuses of which the first diplomatic protests were filed in 1910, still prevailing. He found men, who were indicated as the worst criminals and who were supposed to be threatened with arrest, carrying on work, or when described as fugitives from justice they were actually carrying off numbers of captive Indians for sale or for slave labor in other regions.

None of the reforms promised by Peru, according to Sir Roger's report, have been carried out. The civilized methods of the plantations have been abandoned and the old rubber collecting methods resumed. The returns show that the 12,000 tons of rubber collected in twelve years produced $7,000,000 and entailed the death of 30,000 Indians whose bones are scattered through the forest and have made certain places resemble battlefields.

The responsibility for this, according to Sir Roger, is strictly British, as the whole output of the region is placed on the English market and conveyed from Iquitos in British bottoms. Some employers are British subjects and the commercial future of the district is dependent on British capital.

Blue-Coated Brave Ends Fall River Boy's Injun Hunt

The Shawmuts, Algonquins, Squantums and other Indian tribes of Boston get a new lease of life. Willie Sanborn of Fall River has sent back to his Fall River home today minus his 32-calibre revolver.

Willie started from Fall River for the Boston prairies and got just as far as Prairie square, Hyde Park, and no farther.

A blue-blanketed brave of the Bull Cop tribe met him and scalped him of his revolver.

Then he took Willie to the police wickiup and turned him over to Head Chief Sergeant. The latter made some sign language on the telephone to the Fall River hunting grounds and Willie's papa was notified to come after his ambitious papoose. Willie is fourteen, goin' on fifteen.

BURGLARS GET $25,000.

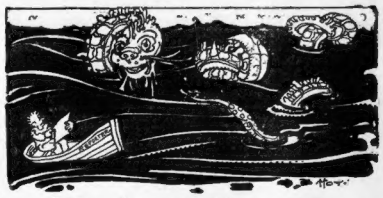
NEW YORK, July 13.—Loot, consisting chiefly of silk dresses, fine laces, evening wraps and jewelry to the extent of more than $25,000, was secured by a gang of thieves who sometime between midnight and early today entered the twelve-story loft building at 152-154 and 156-160 West Twenty-first street.

SEA SERPENT

By MORTON BIRGE.

The sea serpent chaseth himself o'er the sea
And gathers extensive publicity free,
And I have concluded the sea serpent lies—
He lies in the newspaper gentlemen's eyes.

I once met a man who remarked he had heard
His father make statements from which he inferred



He knew an old man, who was said to have known
A fellow who'd seen a sea serpent half-grown.

And that's 'bout as far as I ever have hope
Of getting to facts in this sea serpent dope.
If ship-news reporters should see one, you bet
They wouldn't report it—They'd be running yet.

Winged Auto Runs 62 Miles an Hour; Stirs Up No Dust

PARIS, July 13.—A successful trial run has been made from Paris to Lyons, about 320 miles, by a motor car driven by a revolving wing, says the Figaro.

The vehicle, which was designed by Comte Bertrand de Lesseps and is called the "winged car," has the appearance of an ordinary motor car except that in front it is shaped like the prow of a ship. From the extremity of the prow extends a shaft, to which is attached a propeller or revolving wing, invented by M. Filippi.

The wing, which is small, strong, and thick, revolves within a protecting case. The engine, which is of forty horsepower, rotates the wing by a shaft and chain transmission. There is no other mechanism, the wheels of the car being free except for foot brakes. The wing can be reversed at a moment's notice, thereby forming an additional brake.

On the car's trial runs a speed of sixty-two miles an hour was obtained, with 2,100 revolutions of the wing per minute. The "winged car" climbed a hill with a grade of about one in ten with the greatest ease. A curious feature was that the car made no dust.

SOMERVILLE MAYOR CALLED TO COURT

Mayor Charles A. Burns of Somerville has been summoned to the Somerville district court to tell why he has not reinstated Martin J. Driscoll, one time driver of the police wagon, who was dismissed by Mayor Burns for alleged drunkenness, neglect of duty and disrespect for his superiors, and who was ordered reinstated by Associate Justice M. F. Farrell of the Somerville court. Mayor Burns says he will continue to disregard the re-instatement order until the validity of the law has been confirmed by the highest authority in the State.

NEW CONNORS CASE SUSPECT

NEW YORK, July 13.—The Bronx police frankly admit that they are searching for Nathan Schwartz of No. 3970 Third avenue as the slayer of little Julia Connors, whose body was found in a lot just in the rear of that address last Sunday morning.

Schwartz, on July 14, 1910, was sentenced to Harts Island for an attack upon a little girl. He was released on January 10. His family lived in a flat adjoining that in which the little Connors girl's body was apparently cut up last Saturday night. Schwartz disappeared on Saturday after borrowing a dollar from his brother as, thereafter was not seen, although previously, after his release, he was frequently about the house. His family, all of a sudden, decided to move away from No. 3970 Third avenue, reaching this decision on Thursday, two days ago. They sent all their household goods to a storage and left no address behind them, merely taking a receipt from the storage man for their possession.

The flat on the third floor of No. 3968 Third avenue, in which was found the blood-stained bath tub where Julia Connors was slashed forty-one times and done to death is on the same level—and separated from it only by a five-foot air shaft—as the one in which the Schwartz family dwelt.

In the debris left behind by the Schwartz family when they moved there was found, besides a bath tub, a razor blade, badly nicked, which the police thought might possibly have been the one with which Julia Connors's hair was hacked off within a couple of inches of her head. Also there was found—although this did not correspond exactly—several strands of long hair apparently from a woman's head. This hair was black, whereas Julia Connors' was dark brown.

There were a few discrepancies in the theory the police built up, but all things considered, they were sure they had the likeliest clew that had developed since the stories told to them by little Florence Mois last Monday. They declared that at last they had a good chance of finding the real slayer.

Alfred Vanderbilts Expecting the Stork

LONDON, July 13.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt and his wife are planning to return to America about August 1, to await an event expected in September. They are staying on their houseboat, which is moored near Henley on the Thames.

Before her marriage Mrs. Vanderbilt was Mrs. Margaret Emerson McKim, once the wife of Smith Hollins McKim. Her marriage to Mr. Vanderbilt took place December 17, 1911, at the little town of Reggate in Surrey.

CHINESE BURN WOMEN AND CHILDREN ALIVE

SHANGHAI, China, July 13.—Atrocities marked the recent capture of the city of Litang, in the Province of Szechuen, by the Tibetans. Many women and children were burned alive or otherwise slaughtered. The garrison defended the city an hour and then fled, leaving seventy dead lying in the streets.

BATTERY A BACK FROM CAMP TODAY; AFTER FOSS' VISIT

Bronzed and tanned by hard marches and camp life at West Barnstable, the "soldier boys" of Battery A arrived back in Boston today. Colonel Brewster had a surprise when Governor Foss dropped in at the Eighth Infantry headquarters without notification, but inside three minutes he had his regiment out on the field and provided a remarkable review for Mr. Foss. The Governor stayed two hours, but found time to give the quarters of the regiment a thorough inspection, inspecting Battery A, reviewed the regiment, had mess with the officers, held an informal reception before and after the review, and partook of a plate of bread and butter pudding from the kitchen of Company E.

MEETINGS PLANNED BY "L" STRIKERS

There will be a meeting of the Elevated strikers this evening at Ames Hall, E street and Broadway, South Boston. Addresses will be made by officials of the International and local unions. A citizens' open-air mass meeting in the interests of the strikers will be held at Mattapan square Monday evening. Invitations have been sent to Mayor Fitzgerald, Congressman Curley, Councilman Collins and other well-known men.

ABANDONED BABY FOUND IN DOORWAY

A five-months-old girl baby found in the doorway of No. 37 Eden street, Charlestown, by an officer from Station 15, is being cared for at the Chardon Street Home. The baby was well dressed, wearing a white bonnet and cloak. Underneath the coat was a nursing bottle half filled with milk.

REV. MR. DRAKE TO ETTOR'S AID

BIDDEFORD, Me., July 13.—The towns of Biddeford and Saco were flooded with circulars today announcing a monster mass meeting to be held in Saco tonight, protesting against the continued imprisonment of Ettor and Giovannetti, the I. W. W. leaders who were arrested in the Lawrence strike. The circulars were issued by Rev. Paul Harris Drake, pastor of the Saco Unitarian Church, and formerly pastor of the Unitarian Church at Beverly, where President Taft often went. They read as follows:

In jail! Still in jail!
Ettor—Giovannetti
Shall they die there for being true?
Rise and speak, workers everywhere.
Thunder out your protest. Then act!
Come! Come! Come!

An open air meeting will be held Saturday evening, July 13, in Pepperell square, Saco, at 8:30 o'clock, to protest against further injustice to these brave men. Rev. Paul Harris Drake will be speaker.

All workers invited. Tell your comrades. Pack the square full of people. Save your leaders from being victims of prejudice and injustice.

FLEET ATTACKS BOSTON TONIGHT; FORTS ON GUARD

Boston is to be attacked by the enemy tonight. Sounds like war times, doesn't it? However, it is merely theoretical war. A small fleet of government boats, tugs, torpedo boats and destroyers will attempt to run in through the forts in a theoretical attack on Boston. Every effort will be made by the forts to locate the fleet with searchlights and annihilate it in theory.

A six-hundred and forty-pound projectile, screaming through the air, greatly alarmed the crews of several fishing schooners and of a British tramp steamer in Broad Sound during the first preparatory practice shots of the Massachusetts Coast Artillery Corps.

Prince Troubetskoy's Butler Asks Damages; Prince's Wolf Bit Him

PARIS, July 13.—Prince Troubetskoy has several model wolves. At least he uses them as models in his sculpture. They're far from models in disposition though, even though the Princess at times takes one along when she goes out for a walk. For they have lately developed a taste for butlers.

Last October the Prince gave a dinner party at his home, No. 23 Rue Weber, having as guests Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Graves, Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Graves of New York and others. During the feast a wolf savagely attacked the butler, who saved himself but lost an important part of his livery. Then the wolf strayed into the dining room and sniffed at the feet of the frightened guests, who climbed on chairs and stayed there until the Prince coaxed the brute away with a piece of meat.

At another dinner party just given, Troubetskoy sent the butler, presumably another one, to the garden on an errand. The wolf attacked the servant, biting a leg. This butler has now sued the Prince for $2,000 damages.

SIX-FIGURE WIDOW IN CHICAGO, HONEST!

It's all right, fellows, about that rich Chicago widow who has cash in six figures and wants a Boston man for second husband. Last Wednesday Mayor Fitzgerald received a letter signed "Clara L. Brown," saying the writer was a widow, with electric brougham, a maid, ready money and no desire to marry a Chicago man. Her address was the Copley-Plaza Hotel, Chicago. Thursday came a dispatch saying there was no "Mrs. Clara L. Brown" at the hotel. The dispatches today say that Mrs. Clara L. Brown (name stamped) has reserved an apartment at the Congress Hotel by telegram from Kansas City, to arrive today.

MYSTERY ABOUT BAXTER PAPERS

The tongues of political gossips on Beacon Hill were busy today with the tidbit of news that Charles S. Baxter is growing a mysterious candidate for Governor.

The news came when Baxter's chief scout, Jeremiah Desmond, took out a set of papers for the gubernatorial nomination.

But "mum" was the word, and Scout Desmond would give no hint as to whose name the papers would bear. Former Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, or Baxter himself, were the most popular guesses.

It is presumed the mysterious candidate will have the endorsement of Baxter's association of Progressive Republicans.

The association met, but it was announced that the matter of indorsing candidates would be put over until after the organization has been made permanent. There has been some suggestion that Baxter might himself become a candidate in view of his election as head of the Roosevelt delegation from Massachusetts to the Chicago convention.

As manager of the Frothingham campaign last year Baxter is so closely identified with the interests of the last Republican candidate for Governor that it was not presumed that he would act in the interest of anyone else until he had received a definite statement that Mr. Frothingham would not again be a candidate. The former Lieutenant-Governor has made no public statement to eliminate him from consideration.

Burrill Permanent Treasurer.

The organization of the progressive wing of the Republican party proceeded to the extent of making Charles L. Burrill permanent treasurer. The other officers are temporary. Senator Arthur L. Nason, who was president of the militant Republicans, is temporary president. He said that there was no ill feeling between the members of this organization and the Progressives in the new party, although they disagreed over the need of a new party.

The completion of the organization will follow the enrollment of additional members. It was announced that enrollment cards would be sent to all parts of the State, so that the Progressives who stay within the party shall be card catalogued as members of the new party are being by the Progressives.

The "Red Bandana" organization is considering a plan to nominate delegates to the Chicago convention of the new party at a convention in which all enrolled Progressives may vote. The organization committee will decide the matter within a day or two.

Many Papers Out.

Over 4,000 nomination papers have been taken out of the Secretary of State's office by prospective candidates. Because of the great demand additional papers are being printed. Last year about 15,000 papers were issued, and this year the number will probably exceed 20,000.

Charles M. Preston of Danvers, who will be a candidate for the Republican nomination to succeed Senator Adams of the Second Essex district, was among those who took out papers. Danvers is entitled to name the candidate this year under the old agreement. Mr. Preston has served in the House.

Senator Charles F. McCarthy of Marlboro took out papers for renomination and got some papers for his fellow townsman, ex-Congressman John J. Mitchell, who is interested in the congressional nomination in the Thirteenth District.

NO BUZZING BEE FOR HITCHCOCK

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Postmaster-General Hitchcock stopped in front of the White House in talk to a newspaper man. As he stood swinging his cane and lamenting the heat, a large but friendly honey bee lit on his hat.

"There's a bee buzzing around your head," said the newspaperman.

"I don't see what business a bee has got on my head," said the Postmaster-General, as he flipped the brim. "I know a bee doesn't belong there."

TAGGART TO STAY UPON COMMITTEE

INDIANAPOLIS, July 13.—Thomas Taggart has agreed to remain as Democratic national committeeman from Indiana. Several days ago he sent his resignation to Bernard Korfoy, State chairman, but now has withdrawn his resignation.

More Women Get $5 Prizes

Watch for YOUR Picture

Whole Page of Shoppers' Photographs Will Be Printed Tomorrow.

Two more of Boston's stylish women shoppers received $5 yesterday as a reward for their diligence in watching the Boston AMERICAN.

IT PAYS to read the evening and Sunday AMERICAN!

Since the AMERICAN started out to refute the charge that Boston women dressed like "frumps," the AMERICAN'S artists have been kept busy.

Their instructions were to circulate through the big store shopping district on the first three days of each week and snap pictures of women shoppers.

Hundreds of pictures have been taken on the first three days of each week, and twenty of these are being reproduced in the AMERICAN—one each week day evening and fourteen each Sunday.

Noted Boston artists have not hesitated to say that "Boston is the most ugly fashionable city in the country."

The justice of this claim is being proved in the AMERICAN each day.

Any woman who went shopping in Boston on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of this week or last week is likely to find her picture printed in the evening or Sunday AMERICAN.

The only way to be certain your picture has not appeared is to watch the Evening and Sunday AMERICAN.

Any woman whose picture is printed has only to put on the clothing worn when the picture was taken and come to the American Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, where a $5 gold piece will be handed to her as a recognition of her part in deciding the vexed question.

Your picture may appear any day, and when it does it means $5 for you.

A whole page of pictures will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Watch for yours.

WILSON AND T. R. FOR FUND PUBLICITY; TAFT NON-COMMITTAL

SEAGIRT, July 13.—Woodrow Wilson, when asked last night by the AMERICAN correspondent whether he favors making public all campaign contributions before as well as after election, thereby permitting the people to be the censors, made the following unqualified statement:

I have always believed in the fullest publicity concerning the source and amounts of campaign contributions. I intend that during this campaign such information will be at all times available. I shall favor the publication before as well as after election of a list of all contributors to the Democratic campaign fund with the amount given by each individual.

OYSTER BAY, July 13.—Theodore Roosevelt dictated the following statement for the AMERICAN:

I favor making campaign contributions public both before and after election.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 13.—Charles D. Hilles, President Taft's campaign manager, refused to commit himself or his chief on the proposition that campaign contributions be made public before election.

What Kind of an Editor Would a Governor Make?

We shall know on Sunday, when the Sunday AMERICAN will be prepared under the direction of Governor Frederick W. Plaisted of the State of Maine.

PROHIBITIONISTS ADJOURN REFUSING TO CHANGE NAME

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 13.—The Prohibition national convention stands adjourned and once more, as four years ago, Eugene W. Chafin of Arizona and Aaron S. Watkins of Ohio are its standard-bearers. And once again the party will go to the polls as The Prohibition Party, although A. J. Owen of Massachusetts offered to increase his contribution if his associates would adopt some such a name as "Progressives."

"THEOCRAZY" IS NAME SUGGESTED FOR THIRD PARTY

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Call it "Theocrazy." Thus W. C. Sullivan, a Washington lawyer, solves the problem of naming the new party, which holds its convention at Chicago next month. Mr. Sullivan has suggested this to Senator Dixon, Roosevelt's campaign manager, in a letter.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THOSE METROPOLITAN PARK POLICE?
They are about the niftiest bunch of police officers in the world and have to be jacks of all trades. There's an entertaining article about them in Sunday's AMERICAN.

FORM THE NEW PARTY 'UNDER JACKSON OAKS'

DETROIT, July 13.—Theodore Roosevelt himself will "sound the keynote" at the birth of the National Progressive party, which is to take place "under the oaks at Jackson," July 20, exactly where the Republican party was born, July 6, 1854. Charles A. Nichols, chairman of the Roosevelt campaign committee in Michigan, retired from Oyster Bay, where he and W. F. Knox interviewed the Colonel, that Roosevelt had promised to come.

AMERICAN GIRLS' PERILS IN PARIS are discussed by Miss Alice Nielsen in an interview with Mr. Frederick Johns in Paris. See Sunday's AMERICAN.

CYCLONE HITS MIDDLE WEST

EAU CLAIR, Wis., July 13.—Two persons were killed here early today in a cyclonic storm accompanied by an electrical display. Heavy property damage was done. The storm was general throughout the State. At Pleasant Prairie one woman was killed and a number of persons were injured. A number of buildings were demolished. A cloudburst followed and flooded the country. The roads are impassable. Bridges and culverts have been washed out. Telephone and telegraph communication with the stricken district is cut off.

MOOSE DISOWNS SICKLES SPEECH

OYSTER BAY, June 12. — "This is a nation wide, non-sectional movement. We appeal to the man that wore the blue, and to the man that wore the gray, and to the sons of those men."

Thus Colonel Roosevelt commented on the speech by Major-General Daniel E. Sickles of New York at the meeting for the organization of the new party in this State. Sickles was quoted as having said that Woodrow Wilson was "born amid rebel surroundings, and that we of the North have never been disposed to put such a man in the White House."

Colonel Roosevelt said he didn't "care a rap" where a man was born, so long as he was of the right type.

"I am myself by blood half a Georgian," he said. "The brothers of my own mother served in the Confederate navy just as the kinsfolk of my father served in the Union army.

PETERS BILL WOULD GIVE CIGARMAKERS 21 "SMOKERS" A WEEK

The cigarmakers of the country will get back their free cigar privileges if a bill proposed by Representative Peters becomes law. From time immemorial, makers had been allowed to take cigars free for their own use from the stock they made, till a new Treasury official passed a rigid ruling that the revenue tax must be collected on these the same as cigars prepared for sale.

The employers at once stopped the free cigar privilege. In Boston a strong protest developed. Representative Peters' bill is the result. It specifies that each employe may have twenty-one cigars a week without a tax being levied or without requiring the manufacturers to pack the cigars in boxes.

"NOT WAY TO KILL T. R.," SAYS COURT

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—John J. Coffey, a newsboy, had to pay a fine of $7.50 for causing a small sized riot and joy or grief to numerous business men when he went along Sixteenth street shouting "Special extra. Roosevelt dead; next President assassinated." Policeman Woodhouse purchased one of the papers and when he failed to find the account of the assassination he placed Coffey under arrest. Magistrate Benton imposed the fine and remarked: "That's not the way to kill Roosevelt," he said. "We're going to another him to death with votes."

The Sunday American, Governor Plaisted, Editor!

The young Governor of Maine will have full editorial charge of the coming issue of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN. This is the first time a New England Governor has acted as editor of a metropolitan newspaper. The Sunday AMERICAN will be so "New Englandy" that nobody in New England will want to be without it. Make sure of the copy that belongs to you by speaking seasonably to your newsdealer.

WILSON MEETS CLARK TODAY

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 13.—Final plans for the Democratic national campaign were made here today at a conference of Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic Presidential nominee; William F. McCombs, who is slated for the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee, and Robert S. Hudspeth, who handled the Wilson fight before the Baltimore convention. Governor Wilson's attitude on the chief features of the campaign were summarized for presentation to the national committee at its meeting Monday.

The greatest interest centered in the coming of Speaker Champ Clark, who was Wilson's chief opponent for the Presidential nomination at Baltimore. Mr. Clark was scheduled to arrive shortly after 1 o'clock. Another feature of the situation here is the presence of Charles R. Crane of Chicago and President Charles Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin, two of Senator La Follette's chief supporters. There is much discussion as to whether their presence presaged an amalgamation of forces.

Those in a position to know, say no one has been selected for the treasurship of the Democratic National Committee, although William McAdoo of New York, is under serious consideration. The advance corps of Wilson men leave this evening for Chicago to open headquarters. Among them are John T. McGraw, Thomas Pence, Josephus Daniels, Robert Ewing and McCombs.

"Buncombe" Says Mayor About Smith's L Plan

From his Summer home at Falmouth today Mayor Fitzgerald characterized as "buncombe" the order of Councilman Ernest E. Smith for an appropriation of $500 to investigate the Elevated strike situation. Here is the Mayor's statement in reply to Councilman Smith's request that the Mayor call a special meeting of the City's Council.

Smith's suggestion that I call a special meeting of the Council is silly. As I stated before, if he was in earnest he would have come into the Mayor's office when he knew I was there all day and asked me to submit an order for an appropriation of $500. His order was simply buncombe. The labor men and myself have a complete understanding about the situation at the present time. We await the report of the State Board of Arbitration. When the report of the State Board of Arbitration is made, I intend to wait upon the Governor and confer with him in regard to the situation with a view to bringing about a satisfactory solution of the problem. To appoint a committee of three citizens, who would not have any power to summon witnesses or get information other than what the State Board of Arbitration is able to get, would be a waste of time and money and accomplish nothing. Mr. Smith knows this.

MISS O'REILLY LEAVES BOARD

Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, the poet's daughter, has resigned as a member of the Massachusetts Prison Commission because, she says, the board has neglected to bring about real prison reform in Massachusetts. Governor Foss has accepted Miss O'Reilly's resignation, and in his letter of acceptance hints that there will soon be a reorganization of the board. Miss O'Reilly sent in her resignation seven months ago. Governor Foss sent the following letter to Miss O'Reilly:

My Dear Miss O'Reilly—As you know, I have held your resignation on my desk since December, 1911, earnestly hoping that some rearrangement of the existing Prison Commission might be affected whereby you would agree to remain. There is reason to believe, in fact, that a change will soon be made in the chairmanship, and in that event I should hope that the State might have the benefit of your services on the board.

However, pending such action, I am willing to accept your resignation—if you wish—and you may regard this letter as a formal acceptance thereof. At the same time, the matter is subject to your consideration if you so desire.

I appreciate fully, I think, how difficult your position has been because of the inaction of the board, and the assumption of its duties by the chairman, and I appreciate also that you found it unpleasant to remain under these conditions. If you feel that you must leave, I would be pleased to receive your further suggestions as to a desirable successor.

With the warmest thanks for your service to the State, and with best wishes for your future success, I am, very truly yours, EUGENE N. FOSS.

COURT, WED AND SPEND HONEYMOON ON BOARD YACHT

A yacht wedding as a climax to a yachting courtship, and now a yachting honeymoon as an aftermath, is the romance of Everett W. Rowe of Gloucester, a Tufts graduate, and Miss Frances Seaman of Bayside, L. I. The wedding took place at Bayside, and not until it was over did Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Rowe, the young man's parents, learn of it over the telephone.

STOKES AND WIFE NAMED FOR OFFICE

STAMFORD, Ct., July 13.—Upon a platform which provides for home rule, municipal apartments rented at cost, public wood, coal, and icehouses, municipal ownership of public utilities, abolition of the contract system on public works, municipal work for the municipal poor, and the initiative, referendum and recall, J. G. Phelps Stokes has been nominated for Mayor of Stamford by the Socialist party. His wife, Rose Harriet Pastor Stokes, known as a Socialist writer and worker, was named for the school committee.

TROOPS TO BATTLE KENTUCKY BANDITS

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 13.—A battle between national guardsmen and a band of outlaws headed by "Bud" Collins is expected in the hill country of Magoffin County today. Collins is wanted for the murder of Mack Bailey in a feud, and also for the killing of one of the Bailey brothers, a second brother shot Collins, wounding him in the back. After Collins had his wound dressed he gathered several friends and took to the hills, pursued by twenty members of Company D, Second Regiment, Kentucky National Guard.

SQUANTUM AVIATORS GET SUMMONSES

NEW YORK, July 13.—Nine aviators who took part in the recent aviation meet at Boston have been summoned to appear before the license committee of the Aero Club of America on July 16, charged with having taken part in a meet unsanctioned by the Aero Club. The aviators summoned are Edwin Beachey, C. K. Hamilton, Palmer Fish, Glenn L. Martin, Phillips W. Page, Paul Peck, George A. Gray, Arch Freeman and Frank J. Terrill.

AMERICAN EXPRESS THIEF CONFESSES

BERLIN, July 13.—Haase, the defaulting messenger of the American Express Company, has confessed that $23,500 of the $25,000 which he stole was hidden in Templehof Field. He declared previously that a woman had robbed him. The police found the money in a box wrapped in oilcloth in a hole a foot deep near the railroad.

THINK BOLT KILLED MAN FOUND IN LAKE

The body of the man who was found floating on Lake Quinnapowitt, Wakefield, yesterday, has been identified by John J. Davitt of No. 28 King street, Dorchester, as that of his stepfather, John W. Morton, who lived at No. 23 Bowdoin road, Dorchester. It was thought that Morton was struck by lightning and tumbled into the lake.

LAJOIE COMING FOR MOTHER'S FUNERAL

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 13.—Napoleon Lajoie of the Cleveland American League baseball team is expected here today for the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Celine Lajoie, widow of J. B. Lajoie. She is dead at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Pierre Harpin, No. 75 Hope street, in her eightieth year.

MILL MEN PLAN TO AVERT STRIKE

NEW BEDFORD, July 13.—The Manufacturers' Association met here today to consider the threatened strike against the grading system in the mills. President Gus N. Pierce said he expected a decision would be reached.

The statement was made that some of the notices posted regarding the grading system have been taken down, and that there need not be much fear of a strike.

RED SOX AFTER THE THIRD GAME FROM THE TIGERS

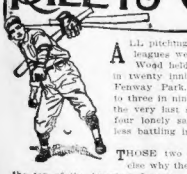
RILEY'S COLUMN



ALL pitching records of the season in the major leagues went to smash when Ray Collins and Joe Wood held the Tigers to seven hits and one run in twenty innings of baseball in the Detroit opener at Fenway Park. Collins kept the Tigers' hits reduced to three in nine innings and they never scored until the fourteenth session. Wood stalled them along with four lonely safeties through eleven innings of scoreless battling in the second struggle.

THOSE two games illustrated more than anything else why the Red Sox are stationed comfortably at the top of the American League. Boston's pitching has done it, able pitching, backed up backed up enthusiastic offensive work at the right time. The corps of twirlers who are working for Jake Stahl this year are not only able, but they are experienced—all but one—and his intelligence maked up for his lack of years in the game—and they "pitch with their heads."

* * *

THE "fans" from Boston to St. Louis were having hen made by either side, Delehanty doubled to left. It looked like a possible Detroit victory then and there. But Cady whipped the ball down to the big first in time to nip "Del" by a remarkable play.

* * *

THE Boston batters hit very freely, as usual, but fast work and game pitching by Willett in the second game held them scoreless for ten innings. In the first contest, Yerkes, Speaker and Collins made two hits each; Stahl three, and Wagner one. Speaker, Hooper and Wood put over two safe ones each and Lewis one only, but that scored Speaker with the only run of the game, in the second battle.

* * *

THE Tigers will make another effort to extract a game from Boston this afternoon. "Buck" O'Brien is Stahl's choice in the pitching department, but he may use Charley Hall if the "Sea Lion" has recovered from the wrenched side that he suffered a week ago at Philadelphia. Hall has been recovering gradually, and Stahl has not tried to work him, but the injury is not serious.

* * *

WOOD, with Wagner's assistance, caught Cobb off second with a neat play in the very first inning of the second contest. Wood and Wagner have perfected this play so that they are nipping them every day, and their success in pulling it long years among the other Sox pitchers. They are sharpening up their baseball brains each when they take but small leads. Wagner having acquired a clever "smack" and blocking play and Wood hashing the ball to him by a turn so quick that the runner is caught off his guard.

CADY also pulled a man off second, Delehanty, in the ninth inning of the second game. With but one out and no was not serious.

Any New England fan who wants to see the World's series games, free of all expense, had better "get busy."

The first thing to do is to send in your nomination blank. This will be found on another page of today's AMERICAN. If sent in to the Contest Editor any time before next Saturday, July 20, it will give you a special credit of 500 votes.

Eight hundred votes is not to be sneezed at and the way to get it is to nominate yourself today. The first coupon appears in today's AMERICAN. It's a big one—a special value—and counts for twenty-five votes. The second coupon, which will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, will also be of special value and will count for fifty votes. The regular coupon value will be two votes daily and ten votes Sunday.

As most baseball fans are exceptionally shrewd and clear-sighted, they will readily see the importance of getting in that nomination blank right away without delay.

Now is the time to start in this contest. If you wait a week or two, you will have to overmeasure the work which will be done by the early starters.

Way put it off? Every live fan in New England will be simply crazy to see the Red Sox battling for the World's championship. It will be of more interest to New England baseball lovers than any kind of a sporting event that has ever been arranged.

Get in under the wire! Let's have that nomination blank today and then get as many of the twenty-five and fifty vote coupons today and tomorrow as you can possibly secure together.

A full list of candidates will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Don't forget that nomination blank. Do it now!

WORLD SERIES CONTEST STARTS

PILGRIMS FACE CUBS IN SECOND

CHICAGO, July 13. — The Boston Pilgrims are certainly a scrappy bunch, even though they do hold down the cellar position in firm fashion, and today are prepared to battle the Cubs with the same determination they displayed in yesterday's contest.

The Cubs won, to be sure, but they had to go every minute of the nine innings to prove their superiority and hold the lowly Bostonians in check.

Larry Cheney was sent back to the slab after working four innings the day before and registered a second consecutive triumph, although hit rather freely.

In every inning except two the Pilgrims had one or two men on bases, but at such times Cheney or his backers out put the stiffer and speeded up enough to avoid serious consequences. Chewier Ray Starters were left stranded on the bases during the game.

One of the features was the batting of the opposing pitchers. Cheney led the Cubs in swatting with a double and a single and counted two of the runs himself, as both of his swats came at the beginning of a domestic inning.

Donnelly rapped out two singles, both of them clean cut, the second one driving in the first Boston tally.

Then Cheney whiffed Donnelly in the sixth with a pair of runs in sight, it looked as if the pitchers had formed a conspiracy to let each other look good as stickers.

Not until the fourth did any of the visitors who started on their way reach home. Moody opened that period with a single to centre. O'Rourke sacrificed and Bridden scratched a slow roller safely toward third. Donnelly delivered his second, scoring Moody and tying it and the count. Cheney pitched a lot of stuff to Titus and struck him out. Campbell then smashed one close to second, but Evers came up with it on the run and forced Donnelly out. The Pilgrims made their strongest bid in the seventh. Campbell's shirt was dusted by one of Cheney's smoke balls and he walked. Sweeney and Jackson pulled safe hits to left, scoring Campbell, and there was nobody out yet. Again Cheney put something on the ball and whiffed Kirke. Gowdy slapped one to Tinker for a double play that stopped all doings.

CHANCE TO SEE DETROIT TIGERS

The Detroit Tigers are now in town! The men led by Hughey Jennings are not playing as good ball as they did several years ago when they were feared by every club in the American League. Detroit, however, is still able to hold its own with the majority of the teams of the league presided over by B. Johnson.

The AMERICAN will give fifty free tickets to the ball game every day. Coupons are distributed by ballboys and newsdealers, and if the number printed on your coupon appears in the AMERICAN you will be given a ticket to the Red Sox games upon presenting the coupon to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square.

This is a chance of a lifetime to get a glimpse of the mighty Ty Cobb in action or to see Sam Crawford slam out one of his hits for extra bases. Then there are Joe Wood, Tris Speaker and the rest of the Red Sox stars.

O'KEEFE MATCHED TO MEET MANDOT

Tommy O'Keefe of Philadelphia, who will clash with Matty Baldwin of Charlestown in a twelve-round bout at the Pilot A. A. next Tuesday night, has been matched to battle Joe Mandot, the Southern lightweight, at New Orleans during the first week of August.

Mandot is the present lightweight developed in the South in years, and he is sure to make things interesting for the Quaker battler. O'Keefe will probably arrive in Boston tomorrow and will immediately start training for the bout with the Bunker Hill "Bonrear."

Baldwin is working out at Lynnfield.

Miss Sutton Wins Tennis Title Again

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 13.—Miss May Sutton won the 93-State championship in women's singles by defeating Miss Mary Browne, also of Los Angeles, in the semi-finals, 6—2, 6—2.

In the men's singles Gustave Touchard was forced to default to Dr. T. T. Stephens. All finals will be played to-day.

Ban Johnson Plans to Build up Highlanders

NEW YORK, July 13.—There are persistent rumors in baseball circles here that Hal Chase, the one-time star first baseman of the New York American League Club and former manager of the team, will be traded to the Chicago Americans. It is said that President Comiskey is willing to give away Infielder Zeider, a pitcher, an outfielder and a considerable sum in cash for Chase.

Chase has not been going well this year in fact, he is having his poorest year since breaking into the big leagues. Manager Stovall, the former Princeton catcher, is playing with a good game on first base that Chase could be let go without any perceptible weakening the team.

President Ban Johnson is in New York with President Comiskey of the White Sox, and it is said that the league especially is here in an effort to find out what is ailing the Highlanders. President Johnson realizes that the American League is at a low ebb in New York, and will take drastic measures to strengthen the league's local representatives.

TENNIS NOTES

Take the large blue car from Park street if you are going to be one of the many hundreds who go out to the Longwood Cricket Club next week to witness the matches in the twenty-second annual singles tournament and the Eastern championship in doubles. Beginning next Monday morning and lasting throughout the week and into the next, this classic tourney, the real preparatory for the national at Newport, will hold many of the best kind his enthusiasts. There promises to be no let up in the calibre of the field.

Beals C. Wright will enter the Eastern doubles championship paired with Karl Behr, one of the survivors of the Titanic. Last year he paired with N. W. Niles, an other Boston player of merit, with whom he went to the finals, where Little and Touchard, the eventual winners of the national double title, put them out. Niles will play with his old teammate, A. B. Dabney, this year.

Among the familiar players who will compete at Longwood is William J. Clothier of Pennsylvania, former end on the Harvard football team. His recent play in the Seabright tournament at New Jersey shows this giant of the courts north more on his game than he was last year. His deliberate style and powerful shots have always been eagerly watched. Since the illness of two years ago, however, he has not equaled the form which made him national champion in 1909.

Everyone will have an eye out for Gustav F. Touchard of New York in the coming tourney. His brilliancy and steadiness dominated the whole tournament last year. It is hoped that without the strain of the long tests to tire him that he may earn the reward which seemed justly his last year.

The champion's brother, E. P. Larned, will meet the winner of all comers in the singles in the challenge match for the "Longwood Challenge Bowl," which has one leg on. E. P. Larned showed form in the final match with Touchard last year which was emblematic of the style W. A. Larned has.

Turf at Longwood, but for the care of Groundsman Chambers, would be scorched to a cinder. The recent downpours have brought back a better hue of green, and when the first contests start the meeting Monday the award will be in perfect shape.

W. A. Larned has been playing with R. D. Wrenn at Seabright, and if paired with "Bob" Wrenn, the old Cambridge boy, at Longwood, will provide no little tennis. It is usually the case, however, that those players so proficient in the singles game are bound to do too much individual work in the doubles matches, and pitted against opponents who have solved a system of team play such as Little and Touchard have, their elimination is not doubtful.

Notes of the Links

Congratulations to Thomas L. McNamara, our Boston professional who won the Quincy and won the open championship from a representative field of the best professionals in the country. As he was the only player who went down from these parts, his victory is doubly interesting. The score of 293 was, comparatively speaking, as good an exhibition as the 284 which "Gil" Nichols, the Wilmington professional won the championship with at Englewood last year.

When golfers are on a vacation they are not so particular about playing in the rain, as the Shenwick Country Club all Manchester, Vt., when the second round of match play was about to be started, the heavy downpour which surprised them brought out the suggestion that play be postponed until the following day, which the committee in charge agreed to. This is seldom the case in Massachusetts, where with very rare exceptions, a tournament is played from start to finish without regard to the weather.

On the twenty-seventh of this month the Crow Point Golf Club, which embraces a neat little nine-hole course in Hingham, will hold its annual open tournament. This meeting has been known to attract over 100 amateurs of this State and promises to be one of good features this year in sport, prizes and hospitality. These links were opened but half the length of the ninth hole when a house lot was sold in the line way. By adding two new and longer holes the course is even better than before and the calibre and number of the field that attend will not fall short of former years.

The third hole at the Wollaston Golf Club, which was rebuilt last year, has not proven a bowling success due to the drought. If the grass can be gotten into shape, however, the course will be one to make hardie, for the drops guarding this green and the added distance will make one of the goffiest holes to be found on the links.

The English championship produces some wonderful plays on that side, and the conquest of John Ball was most popular this year. Mr. Ball has won the British amateur championship eight times. He was born at Hoylake in 1863. He won the British amateur championship in 1888, '90, '92, '94 and '99, and again in 1907 and 1910. In 1890 he won the British open championship, the Irish open amateur championship 1893, '94 and '95. He is rated No. 8 at the Royal Liverpool Golf Club.

NEW RING STAR FROM THE COAST

NEW YORK, July 13.—There is a new addition to the middleweight ranks, and we either can blame or bless Los Angeles for the increase in that run-down division, namely Tommy Maloney.

A few weeks ago Thomas was a budding lightweight. Then he took a trip over the Rockies with his manager, Jimmy Johnson. The pair hiked directly for Los Angeles. The balmy atmosphere agreed greatly with Maloney.

Johnson had him signed up to fight a local lightweight. Two days before the battle the manager found it off, for Maloney had tipped the beam at 142 pounds.

Then Maloney was matched to fight a welterweight. Johnson hated to do it, but three days previous to that scheduled engagement Maloney weighed 156 pounds, and James was forced to call off hostilities.

Then to make sure that he would get a battle before he left, Johnson signed Maloney up to meet Sam Green, a light heavyweight.

Tommy beat Sam up artistically as a prelude to the Wolgast-Rivers fiasco, Maloney refused to discuss the big fight from any angle.

Player Hit by Ball He Batted Himself

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—It is seldom that a batsman is hit by his own batted ball and declared out. The inadequate rules of the national pastime have language to cover the base-runner being out when hit by a batted ball.

However, a provision was made that if the base-runner sailed out by being hit by batted ball, hits the ball himself, he does not receive credit for a hit.

This happened to Kitchell in a Tiger-Brown game. He dropped a puny one in front of the plate and the ball rolled down his back when he started for first. He was declared out.

Get Free Ticket to Sox Games at Revere

If you go to Revere Beach tomorrow be sure to see one of the Boston AMERICAN'S men and get one of the small checks they will give away. Some of these checks are good for a grandstand seat at the big Red Sox game any day next week.

One hundred special tickets will be given away at Revere Beach only, so you see if you get one of the numbered checks you have a good chance to see the big Red Sox game as the guest of the AMERICAN.

See full particulars of distribution in the Boston AMERICAN tomorrow and watch the numbers closely. One hundred will be for Revere Beach only.

IS GLOUCESTER GETTING HER RIGHTS?

Everybody in the city and in the Summer colonies about Cape Ann will want the special Gloucester features in the Sunday AMERICAN.

FINE SPORT FOR SCOTCH PICNIC

There will be nine events in the open amateur track and field sports at the Scotch picnic to be held at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, Saturday, August 3. These events are sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. U. and the prizes will be the most valuable ever given at a set of amateur games in New England. Three prizes will be awarded in each event.

The events will be as follows and will be handicap: 100 and 440 yard dashes, 886 yards, one and three mile runs, running high abd running hop, step and jump, putting the 16-pound shot and pole vault.

Nine events for the amateur members of the Boston Caledonian Club will be held in track and field sports and the professional athletes of this club will compete for money prizes in five events.

In the Scottish events, open to the world, there will be nine competitions in the Highland fling and sword dance events and those in the quoit match, best dressed Highlander and bagpipe competitions.

The entries for all of these events will close with Peter Nevin, No. 1410 Tremont street, Boston, Tuesday, July 30.

Wisconsin Crew Coach in Demand

MADISON, Wis., July 13.—Harry Vail, who coached the Wisconsin crew that finished second at Poughkeepsie, is in great demand.

The Ohio State University has made the best offer to date, but it is said that he has received half a dozen letters asking him if he would consider an offer to go elsewhere.

Wisconsin, however, is determined to keep him if such a thing is possible, as sentiment here is that another year will see Wisconsin winning the Eastern rowing classic. Vail was brought to Wisconsin from the Ariel Boat Club of Baltimore.

Bay Views in Return Game With Bennetts

The return game between the Bennett A. A. of Somerville and the Bay Views of South Boston will take place at Lincoln Park, Somerville today.

The Bay Views won the first game with the Beanetts T to 6 on the M Street Playgrounds, South Boston, but the Somerville team is confident of turning the tables in today's battle.

Danny Martee, the sterling Bennett southpaw and Stockwell of the Bay Views, will be the opposing pitchers. Both managers have excellent second and a pitchers' battle should result.

CY YOUNG SAYS COBB IS BEST

By CY YOUNG.

Ty Cobb is the greatest of them all.

In my baseball experience, covering almost a quarter of a century, I have never seen an all around player the equal of the Detroit star.

There may be other players almost if not quite as fast as Cobb; Lajoie has it on the "George Bench" for straightaway hitting; other outfielders may throw a trifle better, but for work, day in and day out, Cobb hasn't an equal.

At bat he hasn't a weakness. It has been my experience that you can fool him, possibly, one day, on a certain kind of ball, and the next time you face him he will whale the cover off the ball.

On the bases he is wonderful. He uses both his head and his feet, and I sometimes wonder if the former isn't more responsible for his success than the latter.

Cobb can size up a baseball situation like a flash, and the way he divines plays is uncanny. On the paths he doesn't know the meaning of the word fear, and this lack of timidity helps him.

In the field, too, he is a wonder. He uses splendid judgment in playing for batters, and his marvelous speed enables him to retire batters on balls that others would play safe.

Able to hit, to field, to throw, to run bases and to do each in phenomenal fashion, coupled with his nerve and confidence, Cobb is the greatest player that ever wore a spiked shoe.

Two Yachts Start on 180-Mile Ocean Race

BAR HARBOR, Me., July 13.—Lack of starters caused the abandonment of the race of 180 miles from Bar Harbor to Marblehead today in the contest by members of the Eastern Yacht Club fleet for possession of the Norman cup. In its place a special race was started over the same course for two of the craft for a special cup offered by John Candler Cobb. The contestants were Commodore Paine's big sloop Shiluna and the schooner Irolita, owned and sailed by E. Walter Clark of Philadelphia. The Irolita was the winner of the fleet trophy for the first division of schooners in the five races sailed on the cruise ended yesterday. There was almost a calm when the yachts were towed to the starting line off Egg Rock and the breeze was still very light when they were sent away on the race to Marblehead.

Charter Yacht Totem for Governor Forbes

The Hollis Burgess yacht agency has sold the thirty-five-foot waterline yawl Syren, owned by Russell Gardner of the Cottage Park Yacht Club, Winthrop, to Judge Stanley M. Bolster of Boston and the forty-foot motor boat La Reine, owned by E. A. Studley of Portland, Me., to Herbert M. Plimpton of Norwood, Mass.

The same agency has chartered the fifty-five-foot motor boat Totem," owned by Captain Kimball of Boston, to William Cameron Forbes, Governor of the Philippine Islands, who will use her at Nasbawena Island, Buzzard's Bay, during his vacation there this Summer.

PLAYGROUND MEET AT COLUMBUS AV.

The first playground meet at the Columbus avenue playgrounds will be held this afternoon. Other meets will be held July 27, August 10, and August 24. There will be events for juniors, intermediates and seniors. Potato race, obstacle and relay races will be features. Entries may be made on the grounds until noon, to C. A. Weber, athletic director.

Sherman Wins Golf Title for Third Time

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., July 13.—For the third consecutive season T. M. Sherman, the Vice-President's son, won the championship of the American Golf Association of Advertising Interests' tourney. His opponent yesterday, R. M. Purres of the Woodland Club, put up a good battle, but was not in a class with Sherman.

The women's championship for the second time was won by Mrs. W. S. Bird of Dunwoodie.

First division, finals 36 holes—T. M. Sherman, Yahnundasis, defeated R. M. Purres, Woodland, 6 and 4.

Second division, finals 18 holes—J. M. Bruce, Montgomery, defeated F. H. Smith, Ekkursaul, 2 up.

Third division, finals—R. R. Manick, Fox Hills, defeated G. E. Hall, Commonwealth, 2 to 1.

Women's championship, final round—Mrs. W. S. Bird, Dunwoodie, defeated Miss Eleanor Freeman, Englewood, 6 and 5.

Consolation, first division—Mrs. J. A. Munroe, Commonwealth, defeated Miss E. H. Hoopes, Wilmington, 1 up.

Women's second division, finals—Mrs. T. M. Sherman, Yahnundasis, defeated Mrs. C. W. Hoyt, New Haven, 3 to 1.

Toronto Cricket Team Leads at Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The Rosedale Cricket Club of Toronto was in the lead at the close of today's play in the match with the Philadelphia Cricket Club, scoring 162 runs in the first innings, while the home team was retired for a total of 132.

The Canadians scored 17 runs for a total of two wickets in the second innings before stumps were drawn for the day. The match will be resumed tomorrow.

Swedish Olympic Officials Penalized Wrong Man, Declares Trainer

Murphy Defends Boston Runner on Fouling Charge

By MICHAEL J. MURPHY,
Trainer of the American Olympic Team.

STOCKHOLM, July 13.—Splendid, indeed, was yesterday's showing made by the United States athletes in the Olympic games.

Yet, in justice to America, I emphatically declare that our country suffered unjustly through the action of the Swedish officials in disqualifying Donald B. Young, of the Boston Athletic Association, after he had fairly beaten Braun of Germany in a semi-final heat of the 400-metre run.

I do not wish this to be interpreted as a whine from a disgruntled loser, nor in any manner as an insinuation against the integrity of the Swedish officials involved. Sweden throughout the meet has proven itself too fair and too square, to be questioned.

The fault lies in the fact, that this country is too green or too inexperienced in the game, to deal with all the technicalities and delicate situations which arise in competitions of such world- wide moment. There was absolutely no reason for the disqualification of Young, as I will attempt to demonstrate by unbiassed facts as I saw them. I will add as preliminary, that I was in as good a position to see clearly as any of the officials.

How Foul Occurred.

Young drew the pole, with Braun next to him. The German kept pace with the Boston man, but before they reached the first turn, Braun evidently decided to sprint up and grab a more favorable position on the swing. The two reached the turn, with Braun possibly two feet in the lead, because of his sudden sprint, far too slight a margin to justify the German in attempting to take the inside position without committing a foul.

The Olympic rules emphatically state that Braun had no right to bear in toward his adversary's right of way until he was a full stride in advance. Now a full stride, by the most liberal calculation, is certainly eight feet—not two feet.

In spite of the fact that Braun was little better than abreast of Young, he jumped over in front of the American. Young, a matter of self-protection, has either to stop running or be pushed off the track, unless he wished to collide with his competitor. He did the only thing that he could reasonably have been expected to do under the circumstances. He merely put out his hand straight in front of him.

Braun Off Course.

The fact that the German lunged into that land should have exonerated Young of all suspicion. Had Braun been a full stride in advance, how could he have possibly touched the American's arm. Naturally, Braun was pushed off slightly, but I doubt if the interference was a bit more annoying to him than it proved to our man.

After this incident, the two men kept their regular positions, and the American showed his superiority over the German by winning decisively.

It was not the loss of the heat that annoyed me, so much as the disqualification of one of my athletes. Certainly the officials picked the wrong man as the one who caused the foul.

In Davenport of Chicago might have finished second to Young, had he cared to make the effort. It is too bad he did not do his best under the circumstances. For had he beaten Braun, the best would have had to be run over. But, feelings as it is, Braun is not worrying me greatly. Really, I cannot see where he has a chance in the final. Any one of our men is likely to win it.

Gutterson Star Jumper.

Albert L. Gutterson of Vermont proved himself the greatest running broad jumper in the world. He was so much better than any competitor that every one seemed genuinely sorry he did not create a new world's record.

Our men worked harder than was necessary to beat out Finland in the 3,000-metres race (team). The Finns, at best, were a one-man array. The more I see Hans Kohlemainen run, the more marvelous does he appear to me. Both Sweden and Finland expect to win the final of this 3,000-metres team race, but I think they underestimate the United States team.

Despite the disappointment resulting from Young's disqualification, America really has little reason to grumble and every reason to congratulate itself on the prowess of brawn and sinew as typified in the sons of the Western hemisphere.

The unfortunate disqualification of Young is not likely to affect the sportsman-like attitude of American toward their competitors. There seems a disposition in some quarters to question the sportsmanship of the "Yankees," especially on the part of the British, who still hark back to unpleasantness of the hard feelings engendered between the United States and England in the games at London four years ago.

Some Feeling Created.

One of the English correspondents severely criticised American methods for what he termed the "pocketing" of Braun in an event earlier in the week. The American, when this same runner mixed up with Young, blessed the unfortunate American and made a slight demonstration against him.

But on the whole the feeling among the various nations is all that could be desired.

A curious feature of the Young-Braun episode, with the consequent disqualification, is that while every one believed the American had been ruled out for fouling Braun, the judges later declared that they thought Young had interfered with the Swede Zerling, and that he had been disqualified for that interference.

The former Amherst boy maintains that if any one were to be disqualified he should not suffer alone, as Braun was at least as much to blame as any one else.

James E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, and Prof. J. L. Kendell of the International Olympic Committee, explained that in the committee's opinion the matter was entirely up to the judges. They further agreed that there was absolutely no just ground for protest in the case of a palpable violation of the rules.

COLBY NEW MANAGER.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 13.—Glenn Colby, former shortstop of the Savannah Club of the South Atlantic League, has gone to Greenville, S. C., to manage the club representing that city. Colby was formerly coach of the Lig school here. He was taken on the Savannah team to "fill in." The team went on a trip and left Colby in Savannah. This brought about bad feelings between Colby and Manager Lipe.

American Entries in Olympic Games Today

Thirty-two Americans will compete in the four events in the Stadium today. All of the events are finals, and the United States should win a majority of the points.

The following are the entries:

Standing high jump—Ben J. Adams, Platt Adams, J. A. Biller, R. L. Byrd, F. W. Belote, F. Fletcher, Leo Goehring, F. C. Irons, E. H. Palmer.

Throwing the discus, right and left hands (final)—Platt Adams, Avery Brundage, R. L. Byrd, James H. Duncan, Patrick McDonald, A. R. Sucas, Emil J. Muller, George W. Philbrook, Ralph W. Rose, A. J. Sheridan, L. A. Whitney and Matt McGrath.

400-metre run (437 yards 10 inches) final—C. D. Reidpath, E. F. Lindberg, J. E. Meredith, H. B. Hall, M. W. Sheppard, I. N. Davenport.

Team race, 3,000 metres (1 mile 1,420 yards 10 inches) final—Louis Tewanima, Tel Berna, N. S. Taber, Louis J. Scott and G. V. Bonhag.

Rivers Gives Wolgast 48 Hours to Sign Up

LOS ANGELES, July 13.—Following the report given out by Tom Jones, manager of Ad Wolgast, that an X-ray examination of Wolgast's right hand had disclosed two broken bones which would force him to remain out of the ring for at least three months, Joe Levy, Joe Rivers' manager, issued an ultimatum that he would claim the lightweight championship for Rivers if Wolgast did not sign articles within forty-eight hours for a return match.

"I am tired of keeping my foot on the soft pedal and waiting but in hand for Ad Wolgast to attach his signature to the articles for a return match with Joe Rivers," said Levy.

"I consider that Joe Rivers is entitled to the lightweight championship, but we would sooner win it again.

"If Wolgast is sincere in his desire for another bout, now is the time for him to declare himself. If Wolgast's hand is broken, which, I doubt, we can sign articles now with the provision that he be allowed time enough to get thoroughly well."

Crack Bikers Are Ready for Big Race

There was plenty of noise and excitement at the Revere track yesterday afternoon when the pace followers arrived from the Newark track to train for the big one-hour broadcast, motor-paced race, which will be held at the bowl tonight.

Clarence Carmen is looked to make a hard race for twenty-five miles. At that distance he proved last Saturday that he was the equal of any man in the country. It is doubtful, however, if he will be able to keep up the clip for sixty minutes. Monus Bedell, the fourth man, is strong and a good pace-follower, but is not as good as Wiley or Morgan.

There will also be three other races of the sprint variety.

Chimes Hal Has to Go Extra Heat to Win

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 13.—Only a bad break in the third heat prevented Chimes Hal from taking the Northrup purse, $2,000, for 2:17 pacers in straight heats yesterday.

The event was the feature of the final day of the Grand Circuit meet here. Wyland gave the Murphy horse a neck-and-neck finish in the second heat. In the third heat Chimes Hal took the lead and held it to the first turn, when he broke so badly that Murphy had to drive hard to escape the distance flag.

In the fourth heat Chimes Hal went around the track like clockwork and won handily, though pushed in the stretch by Princess Polo and Dexter Jay.

Queenworthy won the 2:16 class trotting in straight heats, the race furnishing some of the most exciting sport of the day. Eelmore, pushed, the winner around the track neck-and-neck in two heats.

Mary Ann Direct things pretty much her own way in the 2:22 class trotting, winning in straight heats.

Country Jay went a mile to beat 2:12 trotting, under the saddle, and made it in 2:11¼. Rodney Maxey was the rider.

The Philosophy of Shoes By Garrett P. Serviss

It Is More Important to Have Your Feet Properly Clothed Than Your Head

(These pictures are reproduced by permission from "Good House keeping Magazine" for July.)

About the last thing that a shoemaker would dream of doing is to really look at the foot that he is to shoe.

DR. WOODS HUTCHINSON describes man, in Good Housekeeping Magazine for July as "the tenderfoot of the animal kingdom," and then he goes on to give what nobody seems to have thought it worth while to give before, some good scientific advice on the subject of shoes. What he says is amusing as well as instructive.

Dr. Hutchinson makes another statement which will probably surprise most people, although it is evidently true, viz.—that men, and women, too, have the biggest feet on earth in proportion to the size and weight of the animal they carry.

The first is that man, as a member of evolution, has not yet had time to develop his pedal extremities into the best possible form to serve the new uses to which he now puts them. Since he quit climbing trees and sporting among the branches in the tropical forests of Tertiary times, and began to stand upon his hind

Is it any wonder that our commonest dream is that of bounding in fifty-foot curves through the air like a giant kangaroo?

Man, in more senses than one, is the tenderfoot of the animal kingdom.

feet to perform their natural functions. In cold climates we have to cover the feet, and leather is, no doubt, all things considered, the very best material that has yet been found for footgear; but the trouble is that our ways of using it are open to a vast number of objections. The cobbler of genius has yet to appear. Thomas Carlyle forgot the shoes when he speculated on the philosophy of clothes.

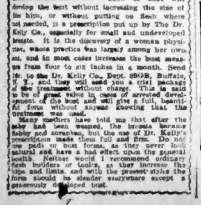
Fashion is responsible for more harm-doing in the matter of footgear than in any other of the numberless vagaries with which she delights to worry her subjects, slaves. Nowhere has fashion been so cruel and so defiant of nature's laws as in her dealings with the feet. Look at the nameless suffering that she has for centuries inflicted upon hundreds of millions of women in China. But she is, in this respect, almost equally cruel in what we call more civilized lands. If all the groans and cries of pain that are daily wrung from men, women and children in Europe and America by the excruciating ills that result from the wearing of tight or wrongly formed or stupidly fitted shoes could be collected and poured forth from one huge megaphone, the united sound of woe would not be pleasant to listen to.

When fashion prescribes a shovel headgear we may lament the violence done to our aesthetic sensibilities, but there is, usually, no physical injury caused by inartistic hats. The case is different with misshapen shoes. Huge, square-toed shoes that look like river scows, arrow-pointed shoes that resemble in outline the bow of a college racing boat, turnip-toed shoes that are the sons of a triceratops, and shoes with peg heels and precipitous fronts that make women sway like ballet dancers or totter like inexperienced stilt-walkers, are a source of positive injury as well as of discomfiture to the wearers. The remedy would seem to be, when the shop contains nothing but ready-made absurdities, to have all shoes made to order—but that is costly and, besides, how many would know enough to prescribe the shape that a shoe should have?

You will find some expert advice about this in Dr. Hutchinson's article, and you would do well to pay special heed when he says, "For heaven's sake, have 'em big enough!"

Such fashionable monstrosities as toothpick toes and French heels, also the crimes committed in the name of reform, such as square toes and straight inner edges.

To Develop the Bust



To Beauty Editor:
I am so afraid of my thin bust that I weigh myself to see if there is any harm in my trying to develop it. My hips and the rest of my body are right for the present style, but my bust is so thin and flat as to be very homely in the extreme. I would be very grateful, that there are those of even three or four more inches development.
MARY B.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without resorting to flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped busts. It is the discovery of a woman physician, whose practice was largely among her own sex, and to most cases increases the bust measure from four to six inches in a month. Send 4c. to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 8B93, Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment, without charge. This is said to be a perfectly harmless home treatment, that will develop the bust and will give a full, beautiful form to any woman showing that the prescription was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned the breasts became flabby and scrawny, but the use of Dr. Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms, as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary fresh builders or baths, as they increase the hips and limbs, and with the present style the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

Getting On in Life

KEEPING IT UP

By THOMAS TAPPER

JUDGE ROGER A. PRYOR, in his eighty-fourth year, said to a reporter of this paper: The passing of time has in itself no effect on man or other material things. Whether a man is or is not in full possession of his mental faculties in his old age depends entirely how he has used or abused the time that has been given him.

The most sterling work of the world has been done by young men, he said gravely, and this will always be true. The most enduring work is done by old men. And this will always be true. The work of the most mature minds is likely to be the most valuable, and old men will always excel in the arts and sciences that do not involve physical activity.

The greatest field marshal in the history of Austria conducted one of the greatest campaigns of the empire in his eighty-fourth year. But we cannot argue from exceptions. The business of war is distinctly the business of young men. The old men, with the clearer vision of long experience, come along after the bullets have ceased to fly and form governments and build empires. Gladstone was past the allotted time when he dropped the burden of empire building and lay down to rest.

What a man or a woman can do in his old age is generally fixed by the life and habits of youth. If you want to prepare yourself for old age to the end that you may still be efficient, you must take out an insurance policy in the company of Common Sense. The partners of the company are Health and Energy. These partners are brothers. They work conscientiously for those who hold their policies.

Man Must Do Something

No man need waste the minutes of a good working day by planning on retiring from activity. He may retire from business and do something else, but he will have to do something else with all his might, or he will die because his circulation will stop.

Any man, young or old, who gets up in the morning dependent on the day turning up entertainment for him until bedtime, is a pitiful spectacle. His fire has gone out; there is no steam in his boiler; and his engine cannot move unless he ties up to one in motion and gets a free haul.

We were all very much excited not long ago by the report that Dr. William Osler recommended men of sixty to be chloroformed. He never said anything of the kind—and it was a crime to make that report—for some took it seriously and probably committed suicide.

Dr. Osler talks and writes sense. If he has any opinion whatever about men of sixty, he knows very well that those who are inactive are gradually chloroforming themselves. If the others are at work, the world is all the better for their services.

Many a man's best work has been done in old age. Darwin was old when he wrote the "Descent of Man." Beethoven went on writing music to the end of his days, though he died comparatively young, about fifty-eight. Victor Hugo wrote the "Toilers of the Sea" at sixty-four. William de Morgan, author of "Joseph Vance," did not write anything until he was sixty-nine. Hugo was nearly seventy when he wrote "The Man Who Laughs."

The Early Life That Tells

But it is the way we spend early life that makes the later years worth something or nothing. Judge Pryor summed the whole matter up when he said:

"After all, the mere passing of the years means nothing. In order to determine a man's worth in the seventh or eighth decade of his life we must find out how he spent the first six or seven. If the mere passing of years were the only fee to activity and endurance, this house would stand a million years. Our usefulness in our old age depends upon the tranquility and sincerity of our earlier years."

The answer to the question, then, when should a man stop work, is NEVER. It is better to be a moving engine, than an imitation of the Cardiff Giant.

From Father to Son

KETTLE JACK was struggling through his home lessons, and there were many signs of distress written on his young face.

"Mother," he said in a small voice, "what does heredity mean?"

Mother wasn't quite sure of herself, but she wasn't going to say so. So she answered vaguely:

"It's—er—it's something you got from your father or me."

Little Jack thought hard for a few moments. Suddenly a look of knowledge, born of past pain, crossed his face.

"Then is spanking heredity, ma?" he asked next.

The Making of a Pretty Girl

Flat-Chestedness, Weak Lungs and the Remedy

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

ALL you pretty girls know that beauty is founded on good health, and if there's one special thing that good health depends on it is a good pair of lungs.

I believe in many kinds of good toilet preparations and face creams, and in lots of beauty treatments, but first and foremost I believe in plain health.

When I was a little girl I was supposed to have weak lungs and possible tendency toward consumption. For six years most of my time was spent developing lung power and strength and, while it's vulgar to brag, I don't think there's a better pair of female lungs in town than mine, and they were manufactured by hard work. I exercised every day for three hours under different doctors and physical culture instructors, developing lung power and straightening out a crooked back.

Besides that I had a regular gymnasium apparatus in the house with a fine trapeze, and was constantly encouraged to exercise in the evening after my regular work for the day was over. I was made to breathe right by an old doctor, who could be very severe and insisted on respectful attention and strict obedience. About ten times a day I had to go to the open window and do my breathing exercise. For a long time these exercises had to be counted by the clock, first two, then three, then five minutes, and some grown person superintended them, holding a hot and irritating hand upon my diaphragm.

A child is soon taught how to breathe and instantly feels the good effects of fresh air. Put your hands around the child's lower ribs, holding very loosely, of course, and make it expand its chest and ribs and all its lungs. If you will do this systematically two or three times a day, treating the thing as a sort of game, the child will soon join in the fun and learn to breathe properly before it has got into bad habits of breathing. These bad habits are generally acquired in the first school years. Frequently a child stoops over its books, because there is something the matter with its eyesight, or else because the bench or desk are not properly adjusted to the pupil's height.

Girls who stoop over their books soon acquire bent shoulders and the chest gets no chance to develop properly. More and more school teachers are paying attention to this question of the proper height of the child's desk, and when there is much studying to be done at home the parents ought to see to it that the desk or table at which the work is done is of the correct height so the child doesn't have to bend over.

The best little pupil develops into a girl with a weak chest, and she is the one who is constantly writing me about pale cheeks and other so-called complexion ills which have really nothing to do with the complexion at all, but are caused by improper lung development.

Fortunately, it is never too late to learn to breathe right. Whether you are seven or seventy this is your opportunity. I know several dear old ladies who practice their daily breathing exercises as religiously as they say their prayers, and who have only learned to do so in the last few years with great benefit to their health. The simplest breathing exercise is simply to stand erect, preferably before the open window, with arms extended in front and hands clasped, bend the hands, separate and sweep the arms backward, while inhaling a very deep breath. Now throw the arms backward as far as possible, holding the breath; swing the arms forward and exhale. Keep this up for five minutes.

A pair of light dumbbells will help the girl with the weak chest, providing she practices with them regularly. But that is the whole trouble. If you start out to develop your lungs, you cannot make a violent effort one day and then rest for a week or two. Patient, systematic work is necessary, and it should really be continued in moderation for the rest of one's natural life, if one wishes to keep in trim.

Never do your exercises in tight clothes, and in using the dumbbells stand very straight, the chest out, shoulders back, raise the arms above the head, lower them to the shoulders, extend the arms on a level with the shoulders and swing the arms and dumbbells backward, sideways and down movements of the arms with the dumbbells are all good for the girl with a delicate chest, and they are also well suited to the short-limbed.

These exercises should be practiced fifteen minutes in a room where the air is good, or, better still, out of doors.

Don't get overfatigued at first, and do arm and shoulder exercise rather than prolonged and competitive walks, especially in Summer time. The girl with the weak chest shouldn't let herself get overfatigued, and she should be careful to select as nourishing a diet as possible. An egg beaten up in milk and taken during the forenoon and again in the afternoon will put roses into the pale cheeks more successfully than the best kind of rouge.

Another thing I should advise the girl with the weak chest to start in is strengthening and hardening her throat. She can massage it with a skin food if she likes, but bathing it in cold water after the morning bath, and going without a collar right into cold weather will fortify

Wanted---More Guardian Angels

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE girl who has a good, sensible mother, and who heeds that mother, has a guardian angel sufficient for all earthly needs.

But there are girls whose mothers are weak, inane, and lack judgment, though it be heresy to say it. And there are also girls whose mothers are with the real angels.

For the girls who are motherless in either way, there should be more guardian angels. Relatives, good friends, teachers, the policemen and all the laws of the land are not sufficient to keep such girls from destruction when they once set their feet that way.

They fall in love with the wrong man. All who are interested in a girl's best interests argue, command, threaten and implore. The girl, apt in the language of romance, believes she is "constant," and takes pride in the word.

There is a word not so pretty which describes her better—"stubborn." So stubborn is she that with a realization of the pitfalls before her she walks right into them rather than turn about and admit she has been traveling a dangerous path.

Under this word "stubborn" I would class the writer of the following letter. She concedes that all the warnings her relatives give her are based on fact, but continues on the path which will lead to her sorrow.

She asks advice. Are not her relatives giving it till they are black in the face? Haven't they shouted themselves hoarse with their warnings?

"I keep company," she writes, "with a young man who is very kind to me. He always dresses neatly and comes to see me three times a week. I have no father or mother. I live with my older sister.

"My folks say he is not truthful, and that he is a heavy drinker. I have been told by friends, also, that after he has left me at night he has been seen coming out of saloons drunk as can be. Half the time he does not work, and everyone says he can hardly support himself, much less a wife. I have seen him often when he had drink in him.

"Because I go with him, I am on bad terms with my brother and brother-in-law, and they don't speak to me. I don't like to live that way. I am twenty-two and my friend is twenty-four. I have a few dollars saved, and they say he is after my money. What would you advise me to do?

A girl deliberately plays with fire and turns from the blaze to ask advice!

Do? What shall she do? Run from the fire as fast as she can! There can be no half way measures.

The man isn't truthful. He doesn't earn more than enough to support himself, and he gets drunk.

To offset all these vices, she enumerates but one virtue: He is "kind" to her.

It would be more to her interest if she knew how to be kind to herself. If she were kind to herself she would know that no man who drinks can be kind to a girl by buying her attention.

The only way he can be kind is to never go near her, or write.

The only way left for him to be kind to any woman is to let that woman remain in ignorance of his existence. If he could reform, in no other way can he be kind and he is not kind to the woman to whom he gives the risk of reforming him. If he can't be honest to death by inches he would be more humane.

The advice this girl's relatives give her is the best there is. No one could give her better. She owes it to them to take it.

She need not hope for anything but sorrow if she marries him, and it is my earnest opinion that sorrow is what she wants unless she goes to her relatives and acknowledges she has been in the wrong.

It may be hard to admit she has been stubborn. But such an admission will be easy compared with what the future has in store unless she does.

A Mysterious Disappearance

One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written

By Gordon Holmes

TODAY'S INSTALMENT.

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode.

"MR. BRUCE, this time I am right, and you know it. It was Sir Charles Dyke who killed his wife. Nobody else had anything else to do with it, so far as I can guess. But if you haven't seen Jane Harding I wonder how you found out."

"You are speaking in riddles. Pray explain yourself."

"If Sir Charles Dyke had not been out of town, the riddle would have been answered by this time in the easiest way, as I should have locked him up."

"Excellent. You remain faithful to tradition."

"Mr. Bruce, please don't try to humbug me, for the sake of your friend. I am quite in earnest. I have come to you for advice. Sir Charles Dyke is guilty enough."

"And what do you want me to do?"

"To help me to adopt the proper course. The whole thing seems so astounding that I can hardly trust my own senses. I spoke hastily just now. I would not have touched Sir Charles before consulting you if I was never in such a mixed-up condition in my life."

Whatever the source of his information, the detective had evidently arrived at the same conclusion as Bruce himself. There was nothing for it but to endeavor to reason out the situation calmly and follow the best method of dealing with it suggested by their joint intelligence. Claude motioned the detective to a chair, imposed silence by a look and summoned Smith. He was faint from want of food. With returning equanimity he resolved first to restore his strength, as he would need all his powers to wrestle with events before he slept that night.

Mr. White, nothing loth, joined him in a simple meal, and by tacit consent no reference was made to the one engrossing topic in their thoughts until the table was cleared.

"And now, Mr. White," demanded the barrister, "what have you found out?"

"During the last two days," he replied, "I have been constantly trying to locate Colonel Montgomery. No matter what I did I failed. I got hold of several of Mrs. Hillmer's tradespeople, but she always paid her bills with her own checks, and none of them had ever heard of a Colonel Montgomery. That furniture business puzzled me a lot—the change of the drawing room set from one suit to another on November, I mean. So I discovered the address of the people who supplied the new articles to Mrs. Hillmer—

The Maid's Help.

"How?"

"Through the maid, Dobson. Mrs. Hillmer has given her notice to leave, and the girl is furious about it, as she appears to have a very easy place there. I think it came to Mrs. Hillmer's ears that she talked to me."

"I see. Proceed."

WHITE FINALLY GUESSES THE TRUTH.

(Posed by Charles Winninger and William P. Carleton of "The Wall Street Girl" Company.)

"Mr. Bruce," said White, "this time I am right, and you know it."

"Here I hit upon a slight clew. It was a gentleman who ordered the new furniture and directed the transfer of the articles replaced from No. 61 to No. 12 Raleigh Mansions. He did this early in the morning of November 7, and the foreman in charge of the job remembered that there was some bother about it, as neither Mrs. Hillmer nor Mr. Corbett, as Mensmore used to be called, knew anything about it. But the gentleman came the same morning and explained matters. It struck the foreman funny that there should be such a fearful hurry about refurnishing a drawing room, for the gentleman did not care what the cost was so long as the job was carried out at express speed. Another odd thing was that Mrs. Hillmer paid for the articles, though she had not ordered them nor did she appear to want them. The man was quite sure that Mensmore's first knowledge of the affair came with the arrival of the first batch of articles from Mrs. Hillmer's flat, but he could only describe the mysterious agent as being a regular swell. He afterwards identified a portrait of Sir Charles Dyke as being exactly like the man he had seen, if not the man himself."

"How did you come to have a portrait of Sir Charles in your possession?"

"That appears later," said the detective, full of professional pride at the undoubtedly smart manner in which he had manipulated his facts once they were placed in order before him.

"Of course," he went on, "I jumped at the conclusion that the stranger was this Colonel Montgomery. Then, while closely questioning the maid about the events of November 7, she suddenly remembered that she lost an old skirt and rent about that time. They had vanished from her room, and she had never laid her eyes on them since. This set me thinking. I confronted her with the clothes worn by Lady Dyke when she was found in the river, and I'm jiggered if Dobson didn't recognize her missing property. Now wasn't that a rum go?"

"It certainly was," said Bruce, who was piecing together the story of the murder in his mind as each additional detail came to light.

"Naturally I thought harder than ever after that. It then occurred to me that Jane Harding must have had some powerful reasons for so suddenly shutting up about the identification of her mistress's underclothing. She was right enough, as we know, in regard to the skirt and coat, but she admitted to me that the linen on the dead body was just the same as Lady Dyke's. Curiously enough, it was not marked by initials, crest, or laundry-mark, and I ascertained months ago that owing to some fad of her ladyship, all the family washing was done on the estate in Yorkshire. This explained the absence of the otherwise inevitable laundry-mark.

"Thus far you have coherence itself."

"Well," said Jack White complacently, "it was a long time getting to work, Mr. Bruce, and had it not been for your help I should probably never have got at the truth, but I flatter myself that, once on the right track, I seldom leave it. However, as I was saying, I felt that Jane Harding knew a great deal more than she would tell, except under pressure, so I decided to put that pressure on."

A Dangerous Game

"In what way?"

"I frightened her. Played off on her a bit of the stage business she is so fond of. This afternoon I placed a pair of handcuffs in my pocket and went to her place at Bloomsbury, having previously prepared a bogus warrant for her arrest on a charge of complicity in the murder of Lady Dyke."

"It was a dangerous game!"

"Yes; if it had gone wrong and reached the ears of the Commissioner or got into the papers, I should have been reduced or dismissed. But what is a policeman to do in such cases? I was losing my temper over this infernal iniquity and never obtaining any real light, though always coming across startling developments. It had to end somehow, and I took the chance. The make-believe warrant and the production of handcuffs, you know, in reality—have often been trumpcards for us when everything else failed."

To Be Continued Monday.

Uncle Sam's Women Workers

By JEAN CABELL O'NEILL.

THIS figures given out by the president of a Hebrew technical school for girls, which state that the graduates from that institution average a wage of nearly nine hundred a year per capita, are very remarkable, and worthy of wide publicity. They show especially that the Hebrew society has for out-distanced the public schools by providing education of a practical sort for American girls who must earn their own living.

For, notwithstanding more than half a century of sincere effort of the government to give its children gratis the sort of knowledge that will stem them to collect the living the world is supposed to owe them, it is a sorry pathetic thing that truthful man who would dare affirm that the average woman worker turned out as a finished product of the schools can command so good a yearly wage as the amount mentioned by President Lewisohn as given to the graduates of his technical school.

Theoretically nothing could be more fatherly than the attitude of the government to its children than to give them free education, test their worth, and if found not "wanting," to open wide the ranks of civil service to them, thus supposedly providing them with a means of livelihood for all the years they need or wish to work.

But the fly in this delightful pot of ointment is a simple though not to be disputed fact that the government wage for the first grade and the usual examination for which this education fits the competitor is too small to be considered as a living. Fifty dollars a month, with a month leave of absence and sick leave on doctor's certificate, being rather better than the rank and file secure.

Civil service examinations are fair and no difficulty is encountered in showing what you know, but after you pass, and are so lucky as to secure a vacancy, you are more than likely to find your pay envelope contains $1.25, or possibly $1.50 a day for a twenty-six day month.

The Department of Agriculture, Interior, Patent Office, the Bureau of Printing and Engraving and the great Printing Office have an even scale for those who pass high, above ninety-five in the first grade examinations and this wage is one forty ($1.40) for each day of actual work.

The second grade examinations carry good salaries, but unless one has been rather an exceptional scholar while at the public school, she has hardly a sporting chance to escape through.

It might be suggested that entrance once secured at the bottom of the grade, promotion would come in time, but it is only by death and resignation that advance is made, few resign, and to the waiting list it seems that none die so they are tempted to drink the toast of the officers of the navy during the peaceful years between the war of 1848 and of 1861, "a bloody war and a sickly season," "is Fear of no ever give thought to the paper money of daily use or wonder how bank notes are made. They are really made by government first grade clerks as assistants to plate printers.

This is a well-filled branch of the service at Washington. The printers, being of the trade, receive splendid wages, for they are the most skilful of their class.

In this work the assistant plays a most important part, for if the paper is not exactly wet enough the impression is a failure. Or if the plate was not polished and the impression in any way lacks in cleanness the sheet is discarded and the printer charged for its waste. Also he loses the time occupied on that impression.

For the condition of the paper, feeding it onto the plate, taking it off, examining it and instantly reporting to the printer if anything is wrong the girl is responsible. The printer never looks at the work unless his attention is called to it by the girl.

She stands at her work all days from 8 to 5, with thirty minutes for lunch. She must change entirely from street attire to working clothes, even her shoes, for the odor of the ink is so pungent she would not be permitted to ride in the cars if she wore the bureau clothes on her way home.

For this work $1.25 a day is paid. Many printers do three thousand sheets.

For years the girls have struggled to obtain a raise without avail.

The government deducts the price of the assistant's wage from the printer's earnings, some of them making $10 a day. They could not make five cents without intelligent help.

If a printer's assistant lives through ten or more years of service work she may be moved over, having passed many grades in the bureau, to the Treasury Building itself, to take part in expert money counting: the number of the sheets examined daily is thirty thousand, but many clerks can and do accomplish forty-five thousand. Every sheet is so carefully watched that the minutest of numbers are noted, for the bank notes are issued consecutively. Half a dozen other things must be watched also.

The weight of the amount of money is nearly a quarter of a ton for each woman. Forty-five dollars a month, with a month's leave, is the average for those who have been promoted after years of service.

This is not hearsay, but the outcome of actual experience of the writer. Would it not be just or right for Uncle Sam to raise the scale of salaries in his service or give to women a trade so that they may find fields to yield a rather better crop for the Winter that comes early in the life of the woman worker?

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

THE TENDER HEART OF DAYSEY MAYME

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

DAYSEY MAYME heard a faint rustle in her waste paper basket this morning, while sitting at her desk engaged in writing learned articles on "The High Cost of Living."

She emptied out the paper, and found cuddled in one corner a tiny little mouse.

There are women who have mouse nerves, and who would have screamed in fright. This is what Daysey Mayme would have done had there been a man present to protect her. As there wasn't a man in sight, she picked up the mouse in her hands.

It was such a Dear, Soft, Little Thing. Its eyes looked so Bright and Appealing. Her tender heart was touched.

She couldn't kill such a Dear Little Thing. Neither could she let it live and infest the house.

Ah, she knew what to do! Putting the Dear Little Thing in a paper bag, she went to the corner grocery. While the grocer was doing up her order, she opened the bag, and let the mouse out.

She watched it scamper to a hole in the wall and disappear, with joy and thanksgiving.

She had done more than save its life! By taking it to the grocery store she had opened to its little feet the gates of the Promised Land; a land that abounds in dried fruits and cheese; a country that is sprinkled with cracker crumbs and sugar, and that promises rare and delightful excursions into candy counters, and pleasing inroads into preserve jars.

"I have such a Tender Heart!" mused Daysey Mayme on the way home.

"Leased Said"—

Friend (gazing at new house): "So this is your last house?"

Builder (sadly): "Yes, last, but not leased."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Copper Shares Sell Lower In A Quiet Market

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, July 13.—Stock markets suffered from a lack of demand for shares today and trading was universally dull. There was no movement of consequence at the opening of the Boston exchanges and in the main the price tendency was lower.

Miami was a copper which sold higher during the first hour, but there were declines for Superior, Calumet & Hecla, Osceola, Shannon, Hancock, Amalgamated, Lake, North Butte and Granby, the last named issue sagging the most.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company reports for the six months ending with June an increase of $1,041,039 in net earnings for the five months ending with May, and Bell Telephone system in the United States reports an increase in the net profits balance of $2,287,782 and an increase in surplus earnings of $811,922.

New York Market Starts Higher.

The New York market opened fairly steady and although some stocks sold lower at the start, most active issues ranged slightly above yesterday's closing figures. St. Paul opened at par, a decline of ⅝ from Friday's last quotation. When as pressively offered, it broke to 99¾, an aggregate of ⅝ in a few minutes. Wall Street doubts the road's annual report will show much more than 1½ per cent. earned on the common, which would mean about $5,200,000 deficit after yearly dividend payments are paid.

Room traders were bearish. There were early declines in American Smelting, Erie common and Union Pacific. Steel went a shade higher. There were slight gains for Vandalia Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio, the former having rallied in London, where American stocks left off above New York parity, but were barely steady.

Trading was dull on the Curb.

Financial News in Brief.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works in Philadelphia are operating at about 75 per cent. of capacity at present.

The Hancock shaft is now twelve feet down in a mineralized area, but the management wishes to get clear through the lode before pronouncing it the Pewabic.

Isle Royale output will be increased as soon as more men can be put to work, but there is a shortage of labor at present at the Lake Superior copper properties.

Frank A. Ruggles has compiled a pocket manual of the New York and Boston stock markets covering the first six months of this year.

Field & Fay say that with the payment of the regular monthly dividend of the Crown Reserve Mines Company of Cobalt on August 15, the Canadian company will have received $4,295,141, or two and one-half the total capitalization of the company. Construction of a new power house will begin at once to have it available by about October 1. A new six drill compressor and five stamp mills will be installed at the McKinney property in Porcupine, owned by Crown Reserve.

A new French passenger line to be known as the Compagnie de Navigation Sud Atlantique will begin operations between Bordeaux and Brazil in October and two 12,000-ton steamships have been ordered and a number bought from other lines.

Union Pacific, Amalgamated, St. Paul, New York Central and several other stocks touched new low prices for the year yesterday. St. Paul and Chicago & North-west going to the lowest level since 1907. General Electric and Texas Company, on the other hand, attained new high price records.

According to government figures farmers in the United States were being paid more by 17.5 per cent. for their products on July 10 this year than they received last year at that time.

The May statement of the St. Paul showed a decrease of $800,000 in operating income and it caused furore any income this year from the earnings of the Puget Sound extension.

It is reported that at the close of this year American Can preferred stock will be placed on the full 7 per cent. basis and that some payment may be made on account of back dividends.

Thompson, Towle & Co. ask a commentary this Monday, July 8," this house says, "Amalgamated sold at 80¾, and Friday, July 12, it sold at 80. In the meantime about 175,000 shares of stock were traded in. On Monday, July 8, Steel common sold at 68⅝ and on Friday, July 12, it sold at 67⅞, and in the meantime over 300,000 shares were traded in. What's the answer? Either accumulation or the creation of a large short interest."

POLICE RENEW HUNT FOR NORTH END FIREBUG

Search was renewed by the police today for the mysterious fire-bug who has terrorized the residents of the North End, and who is held responsible for two incendiary fires in the neighborhood, in the past twenty-four hours.

A small empty kerosene can, which the firebug left behind in one of the buildings to which he set fire, is the only clew which the police have.

The last two fires laid to the firebug were in dwelling houses at No. 170 Endicott street and at No. 90 Salem street. Both fires were started at a time when the occupants were asleep and but for the timely discovery of them in each instance, injury to life and property might have resulted.

NEW TRIAL DENIED SIGNALING COMPANY

A new trial has been denied by Judge Dodge of the United States District court to the National Electric Signaling Company, against which a verdict of $450,000 was given by a jury for the plaintiff, Reginald A. Fessenden, in a suit brought for breach of contract. Robert M. Morse argued before Judge Dodge recently for a new trial and Walter I. Badger opposed the motion. The plaintiff in the case invented the Fessenden patents for electric signaling and was under contract as manager of the stations. His work was suddenly terminated by the defendant.

GERMAN FINANCIER'S LEG IS AMPUTATED

BERLIN, July 13.—Privy Councilor Emil Rathenau, managing director of the famous Allgemeine Electricitats Gesellschaft, seventy-four years old, has recently been forced to have one of his legs amputated. He is head of the German Electric Trust.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The annual automobile show of the Automobile Board of Trade will be inaugurated in New York on the evening of January 11 with an exhibition of pleasure cars and will continue until the 18th. The commercial vehicle division will not be open on the evening of January 20, closing the following Saturday evening. This year two buildings will be utilized for both shows, it having been found that Madison Square Garden is hardly adequate for the proper display of the makers interested, and consequently both the Madison Square Garden and the Grand Central Palace will be used.

The day when automobiles can be sold from photographs is by no means ended, according to a dealer in Henley-on-Thames. Kimball Company. Mr. Henley announced he has sold two of the 1913 Hudson cars absolutely from photographs and these will be the first two cars to be delivered in Boston. The 1913 car will not be ready for delivery for two or three weeks, nevertheless Mr. Henley is to buy Italian as his customers. Assistant Sales-manager Babitt of the Detroit office was in town.

SENATE GETS CANAL PROTEST

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The Senate was notified officially of the British protest against the Panama Canal administration when Secretary of State Knox, in a letter to Senator Brandegee, chairman of the Senate Intercoastal Canals Committee, outlined the objections raised by Great Britain.

The letter paraphrasing the protest by Charge D'Affaires Innes was generally accepted as voicing the decision of the State Department to leave the entire matter in the hands of Congress, where the legislation in dispute is now pending.

Secretary Knox' letter, in part, is as follows:

I have the honor to bring to the knowledge of your committee the fact that a communication dated the 8th inst., just received from the British charge d'affaires, indicates that the attention of the British government having been called to various proposals from time to time for relieving American shipping from the payment of tolls on vessels passing through the Panama canal, that government has studied carefully these proposals and the arguments in support of them with a view to the bearing thereon of the provisions of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain of November 18, 1901.

The communication sums up the proposals mentioned as (1) to exempt all American shipping from tolls, (2) one to refound to all American ships tolls which they might pay, (3) one to exempt from the payment of tolls American ships engaged in the coastwise and (4) one to repay to the intoxicated class of American ships tolls which they might pay.

The communication indicates it to be the opinion of His Britannic Majesty's Government that to exempt all American shipping from the payment of tolls would involve an infraction of the treaty, and indicates further the opinion that there would be no difference in principle between charging tolls only thereafter to refund them and remitting such tolls altogether.

With respect to the proposal that exemptions shall be given to vessels engaged in the coastwise trade, the communication states that it may be that no objection could be taken if the trade should be so regulated as to make it certain that only bona fide coastwise trade which is reserved for American vessels would be benefited by the exemption, but that it appears to His Britannic Majesty's Government that it would be impossible to frame regulations which would prevent the exemption from resulting in a preference to American shipping and consequently in an infraction of the treaty.

Around the question whether or not the canal bill is in contravention of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty all the Senate discussion will revolve. Senator Root will side with Great Britain. So will Senator Brandegee. Senator O'Gorman, who is considered one of the ablest lawyers in the Senate, asserts the proposed legislation does not violate the treaty.

Mr. Foss Should Run Again

Viewed from Every Important Standpoint, It Seems Clear that the Public Interests Will Be Best Served if He Will Accept Another Nomination at the Hands of His Party and Another Election at the Hands of the People.

Governor Foss has manifested a strong inclination to return this year to private life and to give a far greater attention to his own great private business interests than his public duties now permit.

It is always hard to ask a man to give up important private interests for the public weal, because there are always so many ready to deny that the public will be best served by this sacrifice.

But viewed from the standpoint of those who wish a strong man in the Governor's chair who will dare to protect the Commonwealth against the overreaching demand of the railroad in the coming critical year; from the standpoint of those who wish to see a real reduction of the trust-breeding tariff encouraged by the election of the leading tariff reform business man in the greatest manufacturing State in New England; from the standpoint of those Republicans who do not want to see a reactionary Tory faction of the Republican party now in control of its organization confirm its control by an unmerited victory through the mistake of the Democracy; from the standpoint of the Democratic party now in a presidential year with splendid prospects of both State and national victory if it is unmarred by any blunder, the worst of which would be failure to present its strongest man to the people; viewed from every important standpoint it seems clear that the public interests will be best served if Governor Foss will accept another nomination at the hands of his party and another election at the hands of the people.

With Governor Foss a candidate for re-election the people will have a chance to retain at the head of their affairs a man of the highest business capacity, of the soundest views on the vexatious price-boosting tariff and of the staunchest independence of railroad domination, as he demonstrated in the closing hours of the last Legislature.

With Governor Foss as a candidate for re-election Republicans who want to make their party progressive will have a chance to weaken and perhaps destroy its present and unprogressive leadership by the election of a man who once tried to do that very thing within the Republican party and decided at last that the way to make both parties progressive was to keep the most progressive party successful.

With Governor Foss as a candidate, the Democratic party will be saved an unpleasant and exacting struggle in its primaries, because no man will oppose Governor Foss for a renomination unless put up to it by those who want the party defeated, and no such man will be strong enough to make a serious division in the party.

These are strong and compelling reasons for Governor Foss to consider before he decides to retire in the face of the coming presidential campaign.

The Hobble Skirt Is Not "a Menace to Virtue"

But It Is Bad for the Health, and Silly. It Should Have Died Long Ago

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

A medical journal attracts attention usefully by denouncing "the hobble skirt." The editor thinks that the present styles are "a pitfall and a menace to the innocent and virtuous female, and as such are intolerable for our daughters, sisters and womankind in general."

The hobble skirt is not immoral, or lacking in virtue, because it is not INTENDED to be immoral. Women from sixteen years of age to eighty wear hobble skirts—millions of them—and these women are not immoral or lacking in the different kinds of virtue.

The hobble skirt is harmful because it does for the legs and the body what superstition and various forms of ignorance do for the mind.

The hobble skirt prevents a freedom and natural gait in walking, running and dancing.

It is responsible largely for the present "turkey trot" and other ungraceful, stupid and more or less indecent kinds of dances.

These dances, which consist in hopping up and down in an ugly way and substituting wriggling and raising of the shoulders for natural, graceful movement, have become popular as a result of the hobble, which will not let the feet move freely.

A woman with part of her dress or a rope or a silk sash tied around her ankles is restrained in her movements—interfered with in free walking, which is the most wholesome of exercises—and her health is injured.

The hobble skirt is part of a half-silly, half-depraved effort to hamper the freedom of women and thus develop an unnatural, miscalled beauty.

This can be seen in the extreme in the tight shoes of the Chinese, which compel the poor creatures to hobble through life; in the dreadful, abnormal condition of fat developed in their daughters by Hottentot mothers, making them so huge in one particular way that they can scarcely walk, or the cruel fattening of other women of desert regions by mothers that stuff them with camel's milk.

A woman thoroughly hobbled, whether it be with the hobbles of fat on her body, with the hobbles of class, prejudice or superstition on her mind, or the hobble of the modern skirt around her ankles, is much to be pitied. She is as sad to look upon as was that thoroughly hobbled lady, the Democratic party, during the last few days of the convention, and that is saying a good deal.

What women want is freedom—in the truest and highest sense of that word—freedom of thought, freedom of action, freedom to take part in all great public affairs, freedom from that shameful condition of inferiority which through the ages has compelled them to make of themselves a changing, pitiful plaything for man, who would not give them equality.

It Might Have Been Worse

OF

-:- The Reckless Way We Marry -:-

By DOROTHY DIX

A PRETTY young bride has just been deserted in a city hotel after a honeymoon that had lasted only four days.

Detectives are out hunting the recreant bridegroom, who disappeared owing the hotel and an automobile concern, and even a tailor from whom he had rented a swell dress suit to be married in, and the poor little bride has gone tearfully back home to reflect upon the uncertainty of matrimony.

She is even wondering what her name is, because she doesn't know whether the man she married was named what he said he was or not, as she has found out that he was not rich, as she supposed, or connected with a big hospital, as he told her, nor had he ever been heard of at a famous medical school where he professed to have graduated.

The girl and her family are doing a lot of investigating now into the pedigree and record of the ex-husband, but it's a trifle late after all the harm has been done. It's like locking the stable door after the horse is stolen. All of the good they can get out of finding out about this scurvy villain will be the gratification it will afford their curiosity, but if they had spent one tithe of the effort in turning the spotlight on the gentleman's record before marriage the poor girl would have been saved from making her fatal mistake.

Almost Every One of These Marriages Could Have Been Prevented.

This case does not stand alone as an illustration of the monumental folly with which people marry without taking the trouble to find out a single thing about the individual with whom they propose to spend the next thirty or forty years, and on whose good faith and worthiness their whole happiness and welfare depend. Every day we read in the papers about girls who have married bogus noblemen or bigamists with another wife in the next block, or ex-convicts, or men whom they believe to be prosperous and who are swamped in debt and have no way of making a living, or men who have some terrible mental or physical malady, or men who have some hideous blot on their past that casts its sinister shadow over the whole lives of their wives.

The tragedy of these marriages is that almost every one of them could have been prevented had the girl and her parents used as much ordinary prudence in the matter as they would about acquiring a new horse, instead of a new member of the family.

Will Let Girl Marry and Not Even Find Out Man's Family.

They would not have bought a $200 horse without finding out what sort of stock it came from, who had raised it, who was its former owner, what sort of a temper and disposition it had, and getting a veterinary's certificate that it was sound in wind and limb.

But people will let a girl marry a man without making a move to find out what kind of family he belongs to; whether his people are honest or jail birds; whether he has tainted blood in his veins or not; whether he has got a wife somewhere else or not; whether he is a drunkard or a gambler or not; whether he has any settled and honest way of supporting a family or not.

Of course it's easy enough to see why a girl with no experience of life, and infatuated with a man's agreeable personality, might think that it didn't make any difference who he was, or what he had done. She might be willing to buy a pig in a poke, as it were, and marry a man without any investigation of his standing and character, but there is nothing else on earth so amazing as the indifference of fathers on this subject, and that a father would permit his little unsophisticated daughter to marry a man of whom he knew absolutely nothing.

Yet they do it continually. Many a man sees his prospective son-in-law for the first time when the youth comes to go through the meaningless form of asking for Mamie's hand in marriage. For Mamie has told papa to say "yes," and papa is so busy and so careless that he hands over Mamie, soul and body, with every one of her potentialities for misery or happiness, to the stranger, with as little thought as he would a pound of tea across the counter. Worse: He wouldn't let the stranger have the tea unless he could show that he could pay for it, but he lets him have Mamie without finding out whether he can support her or not.

And this isn't because father has such respect for Mamie's judgment. He wouldn't trust her to make a thousand-dollar investment alone. If she had that much money to put into a stock or real estate or to lend, he would take upon himself the task of looking up the title or security and seeing that it was gilt-edged before he permitted her to part with her money, but he will let her give herself away without bothering to see if she is swindled and gold-bricked in the trade or not.

In this day of telegraphs and telephones and newspapers, we all live in the glare of publicity, and there is no difficulty whatever in finding out all that it is necessary to know about anybody else. A postal card written to the hospital with which the young man mentioned at the beginning of this article said he was connected would have brought out the truth about him, but none of the family took the trouble to write it. A ten minutes' talk with his employer; a few judicious inquiries among his friends would show any father whether the man who wanted to marry his daughter would make her a good husband or not. An inquiry through Dun or Bradstreet will give accurate information as to any young fellow's past and present performances and abilities to support a wife.

With the sources of information at hand, is it not simply incredible that any father would be so criminally negligent as not to at least find out what sort of a life partner his daughter is getting when she marries?

No Possible Excuse Can Be Offered for This Attitude in Matter

No possible excuse can be offered for their attitude in the matter. Before a father gives his consent to his daughter's marriage he should have gone over the young man's record with a magnifying glass and a search warrant. It is his business to protect his little girl, and he signally fails to do it unless he does his best to keep her from making a mistake in the most important act of her life.

The Sunday AMERICAN Will Have for Its Editor-in-Chief Tomorrow, Governor Plaisted of Maine. What He Says Editorially WillBe Widely Read

GOVERNOR PLAISTED of Maine, one of the ablest State executives of New England, will be editor-in-chief of the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow.

Here in Boston and scattered thickly through the cities and towns of Massachusetts, are the sons and daughters of Maine, forming a splendid feature of our Bay State citizenship.

Loyal to the State of their adoption, they are none the less true to those early memories of the Pine Tree State, with its happy days of boyhood and girlhood spent in the district school, within whose walls were trained some of the largest intellects this land has known.

These children of Maine, by the tens of thousands, as well as those of all New England, will read with interest tomorrow in the Sunday AMERICAN the editorial utterance of Maine's chief magistrate, a man whose own personality is so strong that, though he longing to the political minority of his Commonwealth, he was swept into office last election by a tidal wave of public confidence and respect and of widespread popularity.

The opinions of such men as Governor Plaisted are of greatest value, especially in these days of political and social awakening in every part of this country. They will be read with proper and appreciative spirit, not by the children of Maine only, but by all the immense army of thinking citizens who make the circulation of the Sunday AMERICAN stand high in the lists of the few really great circulations of this broad nation.

Governor Plaisted will be known in every section of New England as never before in his career as the result of his occupancy of the chief editorial chair of the Sunday AMERICAN this evening.

Every Bostonian who is proud of his town and of his magnificent home port will start with delight and wonder as his eye rests upon a picture and reads an article which tells of a glorious opportunity that shall soon come to Boston.

No reason whatever exists why the cities of the Old World should have a monopoly of doing things progressive on a great and imposing scale.

Washington, New York, San Francisco, Chicago, have already stepped into the front rank of Cities-Not-Afraid of their future. The time has come for Boston to do the same. A noble opportunity for her is almost here. Read the AMERICAN tomorrow.

There's probably not a man living who hasn't some fond recollection of some youthful adventure or escapade that stands out far and above all his other experiences. But what would the men of today have thought could they have enjoyed the opportunities for youthful pastimes offered the boys of today? Out in the Blue Hills at the present time is a camp of Boy Scouts. These lads from the city are having the time of their young lives. They are taught woodcraft, how to resuscitate drowning persons, how to treat heat victims, how to build camp fires, row boats, swim and do the countless other things the achievement of which is dear to boyish heart or valuable in after life. Every boy will be interested in the pictures and story in Sunday's AMERICAN. In fact, a good many fathers will be interested to know how the boys of today are being brought up to know how to do things.

Miss Alice Nielsen, the Boston operatic star, has provided one of the most interesting of the features to appear in Sunday's AMERICAN. Mr. Frederick Johns, the opera critic now touring in Europe, has interviewed her in Paris, and she talks of the adventures and experiences of American girls in foreign music centres. Incidentally she discusses politics and drops a line to Mr. Tris Speaker. She's a fan, it seems.

Out in Newton there is a scientific farmer who has demonstrated that the New England farm can be made to pile up a fortune when properly managed. He has adapted Southern California methods in the East and is developing a new style of New England farming. Everybody in New England who owns a tract of land that isn't paying profits should read this article. What this Newton man is doing thousands of others can do.

It happens that the highest paid organist in the world is stopping near Boston this Summer, and he has done something that will create a furore in musical circles. He tells about his musical discoveries that he expects will upset established systems in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Mr. Nick Young and Mr. Moynahan, the former the eminent dramatic critic and the latter the distinguished artist from Colorado, have prepared an article and half-page humorous illustration concerning the Meistersingers—composed of Boston's most prominent quartettes. Those who have heard them sing will enjoy the little pleasantries which Messrs. Young and Moynahan offer in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Have you ever noticed anything peculiar about those Metropolitan police officers at Revere or Nantasket or Charles River? Well, they are a most unusual lot—there'll be some things said about them in Sunday's paper that will interest them and their friends, and perhaps the autoists or canoeists whom they have held up or made to steer clear.

In a few days now, Boston is to be besieged again. The Militia from all over New England are beginning to get ready to defend the city from some New York invaders. Yes, the dread War Game is on again, and you'll be interested to know what is planned for this Summer. A full account of the plans for the campaign will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

The City of Gloucester and the Summer colonies about Cape Ann receive special attention in Sunday's AMERICAN this week, a special feature for these towns only being a sheet of four picture postal cards with local views. There is an unusual amount of Gloucester and Cape Ann news in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, too.

The contest department has an announcement to make concerning another big contest. This is one of the best ones yet conducted for Sunday AMERICAN readers. Watch for it in the Editorial section.

These are but a few of the reasons that explain why MORE PEOPLE READ THE SUNDAY AMERICAN than any other Sunday newspaper outside of New York.

To enumerate all of the splendid features, the editorial articles, the special articles, the romantic stories, the comic pictures, the incomparable City Life pages is impossible in this column.

Sunday AMERICAN readers expect both QUALITY and QUANTITY of entertainment and instruction. Tomorrow's edition will not disappoint them.
